Island Pair Dies In Plane Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Port Hardy man and his wife were killed when their light plane crashed Tuesday morning, shortly after taking off from the municipal airport here.

RCMP said Arnold Edward Bernier, 42, and his wife, Clara Ellen, apparently were on their way home to Port Hardy when the crash occurred.

Airport manager Peter Frumento said he saw the aircraft — a single-engine Beechcraft Muskateer — take off at about 8:15 a.m. Frumento said he did not see the plane crash but spotted a cloud of smoke a short time later. The plane was found about a mile south of the end of the runway.

A Canadian Forces helicopter was first to reach the wreckage.

RCMP reported that the aircraft may have had trouble gaining proper altitude, and believed this may have been caused by icing. The temperature at the time of the crash was about 32 degrees.

Transport department investigator Roy Jobling has begun an inquiry into the crash. RCMP said the Berniers had apparently spent Monday night in Campbell River and were anxious to leave early for Port Hardy.

Port Hardy Mayor Nick Cadwallader said Bernier, an employee of MacMillan Bloedel, had lived there about one year. Cadwallader said Bernier was an experienced pilot, who flew often.

The Berniers are survived by a teenage daughter and a younger son.

Nixons Make It Official: Tricia To Wed June 5

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon formally announced Tuesday night the engagement of their daughter Tricia to Edward Finch Cox, a Harvard University law student and son of a prominent New York family.

The Nixons said the wedding would be held at the White House June 5. Miss Nixon, 25, will be the eighth daughter of a president to take her marriage vows in the executive mansion. The most recent was Lynda Bird Johnson who wed marine Capt. Charles S. Robb Dec. 9, 1967.

Cox, 24, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cox of New York City and Westhampton, Long Island.

The long-expected announcement came during a party officially organized to celebrate both the 59th birthday of Mrs. Nixon and St. Patrick's Day.

The announcement was made to the accompaniment of a champagne toast with members of both families, close friends and Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch looking on.

After Kidnap Try

Ceylon Under Guard

COLOMBO (Reuter) — A state of emergency was declared throughout Ceylon Tuesday and troops mounted guard at key points on the island off the south coast of India.

Governor-General William Gopallawa declared the emergency on the advice of Prime Minister Mrs. Srimavo Bandaranaike, said a special news bulletin on the state-owned Ceylon Broadcasting Corp.

Rising Tension

The move follows reports of several incidents in Ceylon in the last few weeks, including an alleged attempt to kidnap Social Services Minister Tikiri Banda Tennekoon; the arrest of 26-year-old Rohan Wijeweera, leader of the Peoples Liberation Front, and an attack on the United States embassy.

On March 7, Mrs. Bandaranaike called out the army, navy and air force in the country's 22 administrative districts to maintain law and order.

Reasons Today

The radio said Mrs. Bandaranaika would broadcast today the reasons why the government had to declare the emergency.

Parliament is currently dealing with legislation to declare the country "a free, independent republic" within the Commonwealth.

It is at present a dominion within the Commonwealth.

Crimebuster Dewey Dies

Thomas E. Dewey, who rose from crime-busting prosecutor in New York City to governorship of New York state, then failed twice in bids to become president of the United States, was found dead Tuesday in Miami Beach hotel room. He was 68. (See story, Page 3). — (AP)

Youth Aid Plan 'Absurd... Late'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Absurd puffery," stormed Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

"Ridiculous ... to a large extent meaningless," lamented David Orlikow of Winnipeg North, speaking for the New Democrats.

"Band-aid treatment," cried Creditiste leader Real Caouette in indignation.

And so it was with scorn, edging to the brink of disbelief that this was all, that the opposition, united in anger, dismissed as entirely inadequate Prime Minister Trudeau's $57,800,000 summer employment, travel and hostel plan for students.

Bringing his attack to its peak, Stanfield quoted the challenge to youth, as the prime minister had called it:

"There is work to be done," the prime minister Tuesday told the Commons in outlining the government's summer youth job program, "there are tasks to be performed.

"There are experiences to be gained.

"There is a whole country to be explored.

"There is a generation

South's Troops Retreat in Laos

SAIGON (UPI) — Front reports said Tuesday U.S. artillery reinforcements were being rushed to the Laotian border to protect South Vietnamese troops retreating from positions deep inside Laos in the face of heavy Communist attack.

Field dispatches and military sources told of increasing casualties as nearly 2,000 South Vietnamese soldiers, some hacking their way through jungles and others aboard U.S. helicopters, tried to get out of the area around fire base Lolo, an outpost 12 miles from the frontier which was abandoned early Tuesday.

About 12,000 North Vietnamese were said to be advancing.

For the second straight day North Vietnamese gunners shelled the U.S. base at Khe Sanh Tuesday night and wounded several American soldiers. Spokesmen said about 70 rounds of rockets, mortars and artillery smashed into the base.

Grammy Cleanup

Arthur Garfunkel and Paul Simon, better known as Simon and Garfunkel, hold five of six Grammy Awards they received from National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences at ceremony in Hollywood Tuesday. Among other awards, their song Bridge Over Troubled Water was chosen as Record of Year and Song of Year. They also were honored for producing Album of Year. — (See story Page 6.)

Prosecutor: If Calley Unconvicted

'No Better Than Enemies'

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — An impassioned army prosecutor Tuesday night called on a six-officer court-martial board — "the conscience of the country" — to find Lieutenant William Calley Jr. guilty of murder at My Lai or "make us no better than our enemies."

Capt. Aubrey Daniel III, his voice rising and the muscles of his neck standing out like ropes, closed the case against Calley by turning his back to the board, pointing at the stocky, 27-year-old defendant and crying:

"The duty is yours to find the accused guilty as charged of all offences."

Calley's ears turned red.

The case was to go to the board late Tuesday night—the third anniversary of the killings at My Lai — after the military judge, Col. Reid Kennedy, delivered his instructions to the court-martial board.

If Calley is gound guilty of charges that he murdered, by his own hand and by the men at his orders, 102 unresisting villagers at My Lai, he must be put to death or sentenced to life in prison.

In the defence's final arguments, attorney George Latimer asked the board to distinguish between errors in judgment and criminal acts and "let this boy go free."

Postal Loss Staggering

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor trouble has cost the post office an estimated $31 million in lost revenue in the fiscal year ending this month, Jean Pierre Cote, minister in charge of the department, said Tuesday.

Gamble for Canada: Buy U.S. Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government had the courage to gamble, Canadians could start immediately to buy out the American economy, Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) told the Commons Tuesday.

Saltsman, who appeared delighted as several MPs set aside newspapers and writing pads to listen, said the government has only to look at "how smoothly they (the Americans) bought us out" and learn from past mistakes.

The Commons was debating a Creditiste motion "that this House regrets that the government has not seen fit to apply Social Credit monetary policy." But discussion on the motion, which under House rules does not come to a vote, quickly strayed to other matters.

Saltsman said Canada has about $4 billion in its foreign exchange fund, most of it held in U.S. treasury bills.

Saltsman

This money should be used to buy out companies in the U.S. which are in the process of buying into Canadian companies, said Saltsman.

Canadian businesses could also borrow money on the American market to invest in buying control in American firms. For example, if $500 million had been invested by Canadians in General Motors Co. in the mid-1950s, the same individuals would now own one-third of the firm if they had re-invested dividends.

Saltsman, who said his theory was based largely on a 1957 newspaper article, told the Commons many people in government believe the foreign exchange fund must be kept in liquid and near-liquid forms.

But banks would always be willing to lend the government money quickly in emergencies, especially if the government held attractive portfolios of stocks.

Oil Ultimatum

Arabs Order Hike

BEIRUT (UPI) — Four Arab nations handed an ultimatum to western petroleum companies Tuesday, demanding a substantial price increase and threatening to cut off oil supplies if it were not forthcoming.

Oil ministers of Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Algeria, meeting in Tripoli, agreed a time limit should be set for the companies' answer, the Middle East News Agency said.

The ministers did not disclose the deadline or the minimum increase they are seeking.

An official statement said "pumping of oil will be stopped if the companies do not accept and apply" the figure the four states agreed upon.

Reports said the nations have been demanding an increase of 110 per cent on the price per barrel to $3.75. Oil sources said the companies refused to go beyond $3.10.

The statement said "The four agreed on minimum demands and the Libyan government will decide on the time for stopping the oil pumping if the demands are not met."

Persistent fears have been expressed that Libya's socialist regime would nationalize the companies' operations.

Copper Takeover

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — The Chilean government of Marxist President Salvador Allende Tuesday took over the operations of the giant Chuquicamata and El Salvador copper mines, jointly owned by the state and the Anaconda company of the United States.

March Honors Slain Trio

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Thousands of Roman Catholic and Protestant women, carrying heart-shaped wreaths of white carnations, marched through this city Tuesday to honor three Scottish soldiers shot to death in the capital's suburbs last week.

As dozens of separate mourners' processions snarled the city's traffic, security forces announced a fourth arms find in the past three days.

An army spokesman said troops found four nail bombs, three rifles, a shotgun, a crossbow, two boxes of assorted ammunition and a selection of knives under floorboards in a derelict house in the predominantly Roman Catholic Lower Falls road area of Belfast.

"It was a magnificent find," an army spokesman said. "Every one of us is delighted."

Youth Aid Plan Attacked

desirous of improving the world in which it finds itself."

And for all these objectives, the federal government was putting up the $57,800,000, to be shared in the spending by provincial and municipal authorities and social and youth service agencies.

Said Stanfield:

"I simply ask the government, why does it not give the kids a chance to do it?"

The prime minister took less than five minutes to outline his plan of attack on dreaded summer student unemployment.

The public service, he promised, would provide "as many temporary jobs as possible," but cited no figures.

The private sector, business and industry, would be encouraged to make its best student employment effort.

But the government wanted to keep clear, he stressed, of what he called "make-work" activities which he said "contribute little to the national well-being either now or in the future."

There would be "more than 100 student employment centres operating," the prime minister disclosed, and sounded as if he was getting down to the fine print of jobs and costs.

But there were no more figures. Few figures, either from the four departments—health and welfare, secretary of state, manpower and immigration, and defence, and one federal agency, the Public Service Commission — assembled by Information Canada in what was pre-advertised as its first big assignment.

Students "not wishing to work," or unable to take a job, were assured by the prime minister they would not be forgotten.

For the footloose there would be government-assisted opportunities for "travel, study and voluntary occupations."

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald said armories will not be used this year as youth hostels for the some 400,000 persons expected to be hitch-hiking across the country.

Instead, public and high schools will be used, he said.

There would be roadside service kiosks for information and travel assistance.

There would be outlets provided, pledged the prime minister, for youth "anxious to work," and for their "energy, imagination and altuism into projects beneficial to the entire community."

There would be the chance to make good on their "urge to fight pollution" and display their "concern for the disadvantaged."

Then came the prime minister's enunciation of his "challenge to youth," that Stanfield turned back on him with the demand to "give the kids a chance."

The Manpower Department, Stanfield recalled for starters, had forecast there would be 990,000 students job-hunting this summer, 50,000 more than last year.

The prime minister had let drop that the government expected there would be an "additional 800,000 who will not, for some reason, look for work."

The total read, Stanfield added, 1,800,000.

The prime minister had spoken of the government's summer student program "assisting" — but not necessarily providing jobs — for 500,000.

The Conservative leader was skeptical.

To him, only two programs made "any sense," one tagged "opportunities for youth," and the other involving some 600 scholarships for university athletes.

For the NDP, Orlikow took an even darker view of student summer job prospects.

Add to the 990,000 student job-hunters — forgetting altogether the additional 800,000 who wouldn't bother looking for work — the 700,000 people already unemployed, he gloomed.

The total, then, not working, his figures showed depressingly, would be a formidable 2,590,000.

Even looking on the brighter side, said Orlikow, it was "ridiculous" to think that even in spending $15,000,000, "good and useful job projects" could be whipped up on the "five to eight weeks" left until the closing of the university and collegiate years.

And negating much of the good that might have been done, he mourned, was that the government only now in mid-March was coming up with a plan that should have been in the works last September or October.

Real Caouette was convinced that under the emergency circumstances, $57,800,000 was pretty lean. In war, in a national crisis, he was certain, there would be no limit to the mobilization of resources.

If Shoe Fits...

NOTES TO YOU ...

A reader sent in this little cartoon. It showed two hippie types walking along, one male, one female. The caption was what gave the big chuckle. The male is talking to the female.

"T'll run over and pick up my unemployment cheque and then drop off at the university to see what's holding up my cheque on the federal education grant and look into my research grant cheque. You go on over to the free VD clinic and check on your tests; then go to the free health centre and pick up my glasses and after that go down and pick up the food stamps and slide by the food market and then we'll meet at the federal building at noon for the mass picketing of the stinking establishment."

It the above shoe happens to fit, please wear it.

MUCH is being made of the bad blood between Mayor Courtney Haddock and Ald. Peter Pollen. There are many who insist Pollen will challenge Haddock at the polls this fall as a result of the agreement to disagree. Pollen has denied this on numerous occasions and I have to accept his denials, if for no other reason than the fact I feel Pollen is looking for a political career other than at the civic level.

If Scott Wallace decides not to run in the next provincial election, Pollen might go after his Oak Bay seat, or, maybe he would like to take on David Groos in the Federal Oak Bay riding next time around. Incidentally, it becomes more and more apparent as time goes by, that Groos is a lame ~ and the Liberals are looking for a replacement . . .

REMEMBER all the fuss made when Saanich policemen received a greater pay increase than their fellow officers in the Victoria police department? The complaint was that morale would suffer on the Victoria staff. Well, not to worry. The Victoria policemen were quietly hiked to the same level as the Saanich police and, as a matter-of-fact, given a little extra over and above. So the Victoria department is now the highest paid police department on Vancouver Island — which, I guess, is the way it should be . . .

Milk Gives Calcium

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We recently adopted a year-old baby girl. She doesn't like milk. Is it okay to give her chocolate milk? Or will too much chocolate (we use two teaspoons to a cup) damage her teeth?

Also our 3½-year-old son doesn't like water. Is it okay if he drinks milk, juice, tea, and fruit-flavored drinks, or does he have to have plain water every day? — Mrs. J. W.

First, the baby girl. Chocolate used to have a bad name, accused of a variety of things, but recent studies have largely dispelled those ideas. For instance, the chocolate does not interfere with the amount or absorption of the minerals and vitamins in milk.

There is some sugar content in the chocolate, and I can't say that it might not have some effect so far as tooth decay is concerned, but I doubt if it will be an important matter.

Anyway, better to have flavored milk than no milk at all — and the baby needs the calcium in milk to build good teeth! And bones!

You can, of course, use regular milk in puddings, cereal dishes, and such items of diet.

Chocolate milk, by the way, is being used along with regular milk in school lunches, and you can be sure that the matter had some study.

Now the little boy. No need to force plain water on him if he prefers the various flavors. Those drinks are all mostly water. I would have some hesitation about tea, at his age, unless it is very weak. If you mean regular tea, I'd have some qualms, because of the caffeine content.

Remember that fruits and vegetables also have a high water content, and it all goes to make up his daily water requirement.

Dear Doctor: We have heard that mineral oil was good for arthritis by rubbing it on painful parts and also by taking it internally. Is there anything to this? — T. B.

THEN-U.S. PRESIDENT Harry Truman holds copy of Chicago Tribune published early on election night in 1948 declaring Truman defeated by Dewey, a headline later proved erroneous. Decision 'Final as Death'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Thomas E. Dewey, who rode a reputation as a crime-busting prosecutor to the New York state governor's mansion and nearly the White House, died Tuesday. He was 68.

Officials said Dewey was found dead in a hotel room. He was released from a Miami hospital Monday, officials said.

Cause of death was not immediately determined, said a Dade County sheriff's department spokesman.

Republicans twice nominated Dewey for president. He lost to Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 and to Harry Truman in 1948.

After the second defeat — a surprising upset — Dewey vowed he would never again seek the presidency.

"I have been graduated at a comparatively early age to the role of elder statesman, which someone has aptly defined as a politician who is no longer a candidate for office," Dewey said in his first major appearance after the loss to Truman.

As time went on, he insisted he would not change his mind. Toward the close of 1949 he wrote a friend:

"Nothing could arise now in the future that would lead me to be the nominee of our party in 1952. My decision on this matter is as certain and final as death and the staggering New Deal taxes."

A few days later he broadened that statement to say that he would not seek the presidential nomination in 1952, 1956 or 1960. As for beyond 1960, he said he would be "lucky to be alive" by then.

Dewey rolled up a spectacular record as a racket-buster, first as a federal prosecutor and later as Manhattan's district attorney. From district attorney, he went to the governorship of New York state for three terms.

Bank Embezzlement May Be Biggest Yet

CHICAGO (UPI) — FBI agents and federal bank examiners Tuesday sought to tie together the pieces of what shaped up as perhaps the largest bank embezzlement in U.S. history — the alleged theft of $6 million to $7 million from the Cosmopolitan National Bank.

Donald Magers, president of the near North Side bank, said an executive for a large Chicago merchandising corporation and a Cosmopolitan vice-president — a key figure in the bookkeeping department — conspired to embezzle the astronomical funds.

Magers and the FBI refused to name the pair pending further check by examiners and action by the U.S. attorney's office.

The bookkeeper-vice-president, a 24-year employee of the bank, was fired after the embezzlement was discovered Feb. 25, the bank president said. He said the bookkeeper had never lived in an "especially extravagant manner" and insisted he had never profited from the embezzlement.

Pipeline Builder Claims It's Safe

SEATTLE (AP) — Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the firm which wants to build a controversial oil pipeline across Alaska, says it "can and will prove" it can do so safely.

Edward Patton, Alyeska president, also said the firm has heard nothing "new and substantive" to indicate the pipeline project isn't "environmentally, politically and economically sounder than the Trans-Canada line being pushed by some Canadian politicians."

Patton's comments came in a prepared release from the firm's office in nearby Bellevue, Wash.

'You Americans Going Mad'

Conservationist, Oil Man Clash Over Alaska

LONDON (UPI) — A U.S. adviser on environment clashed Tuesday with a British oil company scientist who said conservationists should drop their opposition to Alaska's projected oil pipeline.

The argument erupted between Robert Cahn, a member of President Nixon's Council on Environmental Quality, and Dr. Thomas Gaskell, a scientist in the public affairs department of British Petroleum, Ltd.

Gaskell angrily voiced his views at a news conference given by Cahn at the American embassy, denouncing legal action taken by conservationists which has held up construction of the $2 billion pipeline.

"You Americans are going mad," he said. "You have eight years of oil reserves left in Texas and here you are stopping a new source of supply. You're jolly well cutting our own throats and it's very worrying to Europe which needs that oil, what with threatened oil supplies from the Middle East."

Cahn said the pipeline consortium, including British Petroleum, has only itself to blame for not adequately assessing the environmental factors involved before applying for governmental approval of the project a year ago.

"The oil industry went ahead and asked for permits without having satisfied a number of people that they knew the answers to the environmental aspects," Cahn said. "They still are unable to say how much of the pipeline will be buried, how much will be above ground, how much it is likely to subside in the permafrost and whether they can build it safely through an earthquake-prone area of that kind."

The 600-mile pipeline would connect the rich Alaskan oil fields at Prudhoe Bay and the state's southern port of Valdez. No oil has been shipped from the field, where British Petroleum is a major operator.

Route in Canada 'Only If Desirable'

OTTAWA (CP) — An oil pipeline along the Mackenzie Valley will be built only if it is in Canadian interests, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

He said there is no conflict in that statement and what Northern Development Minister Chretien and Energy Minister J. J. Greene have been telling U.S. oil interests.

He was questioned on the statements of the "give-away twins" by New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, who quoted Chretien as saying in Dallas, Tex., last week that a piepline route along the Mackenzie "could and would be found."

Trudeau noted that the minister prefaced his remrk by saying "if it is desirable," meaning if the environment would not suffer.

U.S. State Secretary:

Middle East Prospects Peace Now or World War

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William Rogers said Tuesday prospects for Mideast peace now are at their best. But failure to reach a settlement could sow the seeds for a third world war.

Pledging vigorous United States efforts to overcome "what seems to be an impasse" in the Arab-Israeli talks, Rogers told a news conference:

"We are convinced that that impasse can be overcome . . .

"Everyone, it seems to me, is prepared to peace . . .

"The climate has never been better for a settlement in the Middle East, and if we don't make a settlement now, we are going to plant seeds that will lead to future war . . .

"We think that if a peaceful settlement is not worked out in the foreseeable future that there is a very dangerous situation that will develop and possibly lead to World War III."

Rogers
'. . . prepared to peace'

Premier Golda Meir won a vote of confidence in the Israeli parliament Tuesday for her policy on occupied Arab territory, attacked as too soft by rightwing deputies and too rigid by critics abroad.

After a bitter debate in which Mrs. Meir rejected right-wing demands for Israel to keep all Arab territory seized in the 1967 war, the Knesset voted 62 to 0 with 12 abstentions to support her.

But Rogers sharply disputed the Israeli policy expressed by Mrs. Meir that Israel must base its future security on the geographical position it establishes through a peace settlement.

He urged instead that Israel give at least equal importance to political arrangements built around a United Nations peacekeeping force.

Robers said it would be possible to find a middle ground between the two positions because geography is not the same thing as security.

The secretary suggested that not only the Big Four powers — the U.S., the Soviet Union, Britain and France — might contribute troops to a peacekeeping force, but also some other, smaller powers.

Manned Iceberg Held Same as U.S. Vessel

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. government has claimed for legal purposes a manned iceberg in the Arctic Ocean is the same as an American ship and the government therefore has legal jurisdiction to try Mario J. Escamilla, accused in the so-called "T-3 ice island murder."

In a memo filed before a court in nearby Alexandria, Va., the government said the U.S. has maintained a weather station on T-3 almost continuously since 1951.

Therefore, the island or "tabular iceberg" as the memo calls it, should be regarded as a U.S. ship since it was occupied by a U.S. agency and flew the American flag.

Last October defence lawyers filed a motion with U.S. District Judge Oren Lewis asking that the charge against Escamilla be dismissed on grounds an ice island is not part of the "high seas" as defined by Congress.

Congress has said U.S. courts had jurisdiction over crimes committed on U.S. vessels and aircraft that are in international waters or airways. The defence contended that if the law was intended to include ice islands it would have said so.

Escamilla, 33, of Santa Barbara, Calif., is accused of murdering Bernie E. Lightsey, leader of the 19-man team of weather researchers, last July 16. A navy investigator testified at a preliminary hearing last August that the death apparently occurred during a dispute over ownership of 15 gallons of raisin wine.

Trial of Escamilla, who is free on $10,000 bond, has been set for May 5.

Last summer Le Roy Batchelor, one of Escamilla's lawyers, said he could see the case eventually going before the International Court at The Hague or before a nation — possibly Canada — claiming that T-3's position is within its territorial waters.

Soviets 'Violate' Embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet police seized a Soviet doctor's family Tuesday after they had entered United States embassy grounds to seek information on emigration. The embassy delivered a strong protest accusing the police of "violation of embassy territory."

An embassy spokesman said the incident developed into a struggle between a dozen U.S. employees and the Soviet militiamen.

Militia guards pulled the doctor's wife and two daughters, aged 5 and 9, onto the sidewalk in front of the embassy and took them away.

Peking Beeper

Satellite Silence Broken

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China has broken a two-week silence on the launching of its second space satellite, indicating it is more sophisticated than the first one and may have been launched by a bigger rocket.

Peking radio told listeners Tuesday that the satellite, launched March 3, is transmitting scientific data in "whistles, pips, bleeps and blurrs" to its ground control.

China's first satellite, launched last April 24, flew around the world playing the song The East is Red.

The new satellite weighs 486 pounds, 105 more than the first one.

Canada Leads the Way

THE HIGHLY RESPECTED Manchester Guardian Weekly views with some alarm what it calls Britain's "downward spiral" and calls for Prime Minister Heath to do something quickly if he wishes to avoid grave injury being done to the country's social fabric.

It claims the Conservative government's economic policy has inflicted colossal casualties upon a number of major industries, leading to bankruptcies and cutbacks. It points out that the retail price index has been rising faster than at any time since Labor's worst days and that the incidence of strikes is more damaging than ever before.

The major mark of disaster, it implies, is the fact that unemployment, at 721,000, is at its highest for 31 years and likely to become even worse.

Across the English Channel similar predictions of disaster are being made for France where for the first time since the dark days of 1968 unemployment stands above 300,000. This has led to morbid speculation in newspapers and from economists who now openly refer to the country's political "malaise" and economic insecurity.

Meanwhile, back home in Canada, all appears to be well. Ottawa does not appear to be at all concerned over the fact that the number of unemployed Canadians far exceeds the number of out-of-work Englishmen or out-of-work Frenchmen even though Canada's population is less than half that of either Britain or France.

However if European analysts are right in their contention that high unemployment indicates political instability, Canada may now make just claim of having the shakiest regime in the Western hemisphere.

Ottawa's Wise Course

IT IS TO BE HOPED that the action of two American states—New York and Washington—in considering legislation to license marijuana as they do liquor will do nothing to alter Ottawa's determination to complete its recently announced program of research into the effects on the human body of marijuana and other cannabis substances before making any change in the drug's legal status in Canada.

Though it is not likely that either New York or Washington will pass such legislation legalizing marijuana under government control this year there is undoubtedly a strong movement favoring such action.

Much support for a move of this kind has been brought about by the general recognition that the specific effects of marijuana differ from those of hard drugs. However they are still serious enough for any government to avoid putting its official stamp of approval upon them through legislation.

Commenting on the matter, the Christian Science Monitor says; ". . . we are aware of the pro-legalization arguments such as that the status quo encourages a clandestine and criminal drug-selling network or widespread disrespect for law as users evade it. But we feel that marijuana itself has nowhere near been vindicated as a harmless drug. Licensing would only affix to the state the moral onus now borne by clandestine traders. . . ."

From all this it may well be concluded that Canada is following the wisest of all courses in dealing with the marijuana problem. However, Ottawa should remain alert to withstand the growing onslaught of persuasive arguments now being launched with some success south of the border.

Whether vociferously nationalistic or not, Canadians — including cabinet ministers — are still influenced to a large degree by happenings in the United States.

Control for Snowmobiles

THE B.C. GOVERNMENT has moved with commendable dispatch to bring snowmobiles and other off-the-road vehicles under more control. Most of the population of British Columbia lives in the southwest corner of the province where snow is not usually delivered to the doorstep, and never for months on end, and the recreational use of snowmobiles has grown more slowly than in other provinces. But it nevertheless is increasing, and the tale of death and injury from snowmobile accidents in the east is enough to make firm regulation imperative.

The bill before the provincial legislature seems likely to provide such regulation effectively. It required that "all-terrain" vehicles — a term which includes not only snowmobiles but other machines such as hovercraft — must be registered and must not be operated without registration. It prohibits careless, reckless or negligent operation; travel across any tree nursery or planting, on railway tracks or across private property without permission, and use of the vehicle to harm or harass any animals, wild or domestic.

The fines for offences against the act can run up to $500. But if this were not enough, a further deterrent to irresponsible behavior is included in the bill. Responsibility for death, injury or damage to property is placed on the owner if the operator has his expressed or implied permission to use the machine.

The proposed legislation also provides for further regulations to be established limiting the area, seasons and periods in which all-terrain vehicles can be operated. Some of the areas where they should be banned, we suggest, are parks where tranquillity is at a premium.

A Practical Peace-Keeping Role

By ROBERT CAMERON

ACCORDING to the latest listing, peace-keeping is the lowest of Canada's defence priorities. But this shouldn't be taken at face value. What really matters is not such an oracular judgment, but where the heart is. And there's little doubt that a peace-keeping job anywhere in the world arouses Canadian enthusiasm more than all other defence responsibilities.

Since practically every assignment has some different wrinkles, planning for peace-keeping isn't easy. Canada's efforts in the past have been outstanding but at this point we seem to be bogged down in several places. We're not at all happy about the situation nor do we know how to avoid it in the future. Nevertheless, eager as a girl past her mating prime, we're clearly ready to jump at any reasonable bid for our favors.

With action in the Middle East and Vietnam simmering down, the prospect of new business looks good. So right now may be a good time to reflect on some fundamentals of our military support for the UN.

One major consideration is the type of equipment we need. It's fairly obvious we aren't going to be peace-keeping anywhere unless invited by the belligerents and have reasonable assurance they won't start cutting us down in the middle. What we will be doing is strictly a police action. Even for such a mission our troops need something more than night sticks. But we seem to have gone overboard in purchasing light, air transportable equipment. As a consequence we're short of money to replace the heavy armament our army units need for priority work in Europe.

This is a clear case of putting the cart before the horse. The only place we are likely to fight will — as always — be with allies when we have a major operation on our hands. If we can't afford the glamor equipment we'd like for UN jobs, after satisfying major needs, we should specialize in areas we can support — communications, engineering, transport, etc.

A second factor is the distance a troubled spot is from Canada. It's no secret that for some time we have been exercising contingency plans to peace-keep in Vietnam, if asked. Proponents of light equipment have traded heavily on this prospect to justify their wisdom. But should we get involved there at all? Vietnam is half-way around the world. Supporting a unit of any consequence out there would be enormously costly. As a cardinal principle it thus seems that any future missions we accept should be much closer to home.

In contrast with Southeast Asia, the Middle East seems like an ideal outlet for our fervor. It's less remote, the logistics problem would be more commensurate with our means, and it's an area of strategic and economic interest to us. More importantly, it is on the southern flank of NATO Europe where we are already heavily committed.

Thus far all the noises coming from truce talks indicate a preference for big power peace-keeping rather than the minor league. Nevertheless, chances are good we may be able to fulfill a useful function and without having to worry about air transportability of combat equipment. So we should be planning with this in mind.

This brings me to Cyprus and some lessons about manpower. Our effort there has no doubt been a resounding success. But we've tied down a substantial number of regular-force personnel with duty long after they've extracted its operational lessons. We would have been wiser to have got our militia into the act and used the mission to broaden defence participation in Canada.

When suddenly called to take on a peace-keeping mission, regular units are the logical ones to dispatch. However, there is no reason why they couldn't be largely replaced by militia soon thereafter. The necessary training wouldn't be excessive; the prospect of such work should be good for morale; and in the absence of compulsory military service, it would allow those who are willing or even keen to participate in this popular national undertaking.

The most significant pay-off would be that after a useful period of operation in a strange environment, our strictly limited regular forces would be freed as standby for any other emergency. The Quebec affair certainly pointed up both the necessity for such reserves and the weakness of our regulars being over-committed with long-term assignments.

Another possibility would be to organize students needing summer employment into service units for UN duty. Training could be given during the school year and with luck we might get several seasons work out of them. It has been established that summer attachment to the Canadian forces for military training was a resounding success. So there is no reason why the disciplined effort of students wouldn't be just as profitable for Canada and themselves, on a practical rehabilitation project allied to peace-keeping.

Many people might say why call out militia and pay them full time when we have regular forces standing by doing nothing.

Part of the answer is that regular units are seldom "standing by doing nothing" — despite what some uninformed people may think. Secondly, it ought to be pretty clear that you will have no protection for an unexpected conflagration in a critical area if your expert firemen are continuously fighting bush fires elsewhere.

A final comment about the cost of militia is that on peace-keeping the charges are normally borne by the UN. So only a small fraction of their pay would appear as a direct charge on our budget. Other countries trade on this fact to train reserves. But we seem to put professional pride in such undertakings above that of economic common sense. And we do so despite the fact that our expertise can never make the difference between success and failure.

In conclusion, it is perhaps worth a reminder that much as I think Canada should demur over some UN operations because of equipment, locale or manpower requirements, our past performance would probably prompt the secretary-general to counter with the same question Adam asked when Eve hesitated at his proposal of marriage; "Is there anyone else?"

The Stamp Act, one of the major causes of the American Revolution, was repealed by the British Parliament 205 years ago today — in 1766. The act, designed to raise revenue in the American colonies, drew stiff opposition at once. It was so great that the revenue amounted to less than the cost of collection.

1960 — A Northwest Airlines plane flying from Minneapolis to Miami exploded at Tell City, Ind., killing 63 persons including four Canadians.

1958 — The United States Navy succeeded in sending a Vanguard satellite into orbit around the earth.

1951 — The Vatican excommunicated all Roman Catholics taking part in crimes against the church of Czechoslovakia.

Canada's New Security Service

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

IT WAS beautiful — to the point, almost, of being an art-form — the way Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer danced all around the informational maypole the other day without tripping over a single question as to what, if anything, the RCMP was doing about such separatist groups as the Parti Quebecois dedicated to the destruction of Confederation.

He wouldn't even say, in a fast-stepping 20 minutes of soft and evasive answers to hard and specific questions, what the security and intelligence division of the force might be doing to keep tabs on Communists, Maoists and other subversive elements.

★ ★ ★

Both Jean-Pierre Goyer and the Canadian Security Service are "new boys" in their fields.

Goyer, the second Quebecker (Pierre Elliott Trudeau, briefly, was the first) to become the cabinet boss of the RCMP, replaces former Solicitor-General George McIlraith.

New, Mr. Goyer has been in Parliament only five years, while George McIlraith, in the Commons 31 years, is still there, if no longer in the cabinet.

And the Canadian Security Service is the replacement in the RCMP of the old security and intelligence division.

In newness the CSS rates with the mint-freshness of its boss, the solicitor-general.

They both came on the national stage following — perhaps even because of — last fall's FLQ terror-kidnap-murder crisis.

★ ★ ★

The new security service shapes up in the shadows — where, as any good cloak and dagger outfit must be, Jean-Pierre Goyer has demonstrated he intends keeping it — as a semi-autonomous, well-financed organization, almost entirely civilian-manned, and much better educated, trained and equipped to cope with subversion here at home or imported from abroad.

But unlike the American Central Intelligence Agency or Britain's storied MI 5, there'll be no spying out there in the cold of the international world.

Its assignment is strictly and exclusively "homework."

In the past, the old security and intelligence division was manned from within the RCMP ranks with a five-year period of intensive training for its very specialized job.

It grew in numbers and prestige, and performed, as far as anyone outside its circle knew, faultlessly, until it accounted for about one of every 10 men in the RCMP.

★ ★ ★

But good, specially trained, sophisticated police investigators don't necessarily make the best intelligence agents.

Or so thought the Royal Commission on Security in recommending a special and separate exclusively civilian intelligence agency.

That same royal commission sounded a loud and ringing note of warning, back in June of 1969, that the FLQ was ticking away like a time-bomb and was a far greater danger to the safety of the state than foreign espionage agents.

Prime Minister Trudeau, a Quebecker, perhaps even then knowing more than he dared to make public about the FLQ agreed, and ordered a new Canadian Security Service into operation within the existing S and I structure of the RCMP.

It got a new chief, former diplomat John Kennett Starnes, one-time Canadian ambassador to Germany and the United Arab Republic, and began recruiting university men and sending the cream of its non-college members back to the halls of higher learning.

It was busy about its routine business of keeping an eye on Iron Curtain embassy personnel, making security checks on federal civil servants in "sensitive" posts, screening prospective immigrants, watching revolutionary radical groups, and providing bodyguards — often riflemen with telescopic sights behind the turrets and towers of Parliament Hill — for visiting presidents, prime ministers and others in the special world of the VIP.

Then came the Quebec terror.

And while it was the RCMP — and there is no shadow of doubt about it — that finally broke the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte and the James Cross kidnapping, it all took agonizingly far too long to crack those cases.

★ ★ ★

The new security service within the old S and I Division of the RCMP discovered it didn't have the manpower, the money, nor the special Quebec know-how — and worse, much worse, it found that taken-for-granted co-operation with other police forces, of which there are scores on Montreal Island, simply didn't exist.

Instead of co-operation there was rivalry and, there is some reason to believe, even obstruction in some quarters.

But now that's all changed. The new Canadian Security Service, with intelligence men no longer coming out second best in the inter-agency competition for the RCMP for men and money, has been given semi-autonomy, its own budget and a special chain of command where, in the higher echelon, a superintendent or a deputy commissioner will be known simply as "Mr."

And the handcuffs are coming off.

The security agents are going back on the campus from where former prime minister Lester Pearson banished them eight years ago in the name of "civil liberty."

And they're back in business in all groups—including political — but their new boss Jean-Pierre Goyer isn't talking about that nor much of anything else having to do with the new security.

Except to say that where the safety of the state is involved, nobody and no group can be completely free of security surveillance.

Back Once More to a Movie House

By FRANK LOWE

THE OTHER afternoon my wife shocked me to the core when she phoned and said she wanted me to take her to a movie that evening.

"Take my wife to a movie?" I queried in unbelieving tones. "Darling, I have too much respect for you. Also, think of my reputation — why, I wouldn't dare be seen in a movie house."

Frankly, I figured I had a pretty good argument. I mean, for the last few years I had looked at the ads for movies—and wowee.

After all, I had once seen a skin flick, when I was younger, and almost swore off sex. So what would happen to me today, when I am older and more prone to shock, if I saw a skin flick?

★ ★ ★

Also, I have been reading movie reviews.

There was Easy Rider, for instance. As Al Capp said: "The only good thing about that movie was that it had a happy ending — both the lead punks got their heads blown off."

And Midnight Cowboy. People like that I would cross the street to get away from, so who needed to pay money to see them?

So I had sworn off movies. Actually, once I learned how to read a TV schedule, this wasn't very difficult to do.

★ ★ ★

Because on TV, I discovered, were the movies I used to be hooked on. During one entire winter I lived once again with Humphrey Bogart.

Then there was a glorious period — I forget the exact duration — when W. C. Fields returned. I caught up on the Thin Man series — and wasn't Myrna Loy really something? — and got another long look at the Marx Brothers.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers took up another entire winter, and then there were visits with Cary Grant and Gary Cooper and Katharine Hepburn.

So who needed to go down town to see a skin flick?

My wife listened fairly patiently to this argument, but when I had finished merely nodded in the way wives do when they are close to exasperation, and repeated:

"I want you to take me to a movie tonight. There are still good movies, you know."

"Oh, no," I recoiled. "You mean we are going to see an art movie? One which is so full of symbols it takes two weeks of talking it over with friends before I realize what it was all about? No thanks."

But my wife was relentless. She insisted there were still movies that even I could understand. Movies which would make me laugh.

★ ★ ★

"You're kidding," I replied. "All a producer wants to hear in a movie house today is heavy breathing. If he heard a laugh he would cancel the run — he would be sure he had a flop on his hands."

My wife by this time wasn't even listening. She merely told me to meet her at 6:30 p.m., have a drink and then go to a movie. Then she hung up.

It was a very nervous afternoon for me, let me tell you. After something like 10 years I was going to be inside a movie house once again.

Would I know how to behave? Would my reactions embarrass my wife? Did I have enough money? I had heard that going to a movie now was about as expensive as taking a trip to Florida.

So I got to our rendezvous earlier than promised. Somehow I had that ominous feeling that this was going to call for more than one drink.

But what do you know? The evening was a smash success.

★ ★ ★

The movie my wife had dragooned me to happened to be Little Big Man. There I was, front and centre, eyes wide open. The first time I laughed out loud I quickly hushed myself, and looked around nervously.

But I needn't have worried. Everybody else was laughing, too.

Imagine that. People in a today movie house sitting there and laughing.

It was quite a sensation, and quite a discovery.

Who knows, I may go to another movie next year.

"Can't you be romantic just once instead of worrying if the power is out again?"

It's Going To Be a Long, Long Time Before Anything Happens Anywhere

Oil Pipeline Talk Runs Ahead of Action

By ROD CURRIE, from Washington

The fastest-moving drama in town these days is the debate over the Alaskan and-or Canadian pipeline to tap the vast oil resources of Alaska's North Slope. But as in a badly synchronized movie, the talking is running far ahead of the action.

Now that the risks inherent in the original scheme for a trans-Alaska line have sparked understandable concern in Canada, the verbiage is burgeoning on yet another front. No one denies the potential for damage in the various schemes. But the note of urgency running through it all somehow seems to suggest that irreparable damage to the environment is going to be wrought next Tuesday unless something is done today.

However, several octaves below this shrill debate — if one listens closely — may be heard calmer voices. In effect, they seem to be saying: "Cool it. There isn't going to be any northern pipeline anywhere for a long, long time."

Although generally discounted or even unheard in the cavalry charge to rescue the northern environment in the nick of time, there is much in recent history to support the conclusions of these voices.

After discovery of the North Slope oil, Alaska, in an act that now seems precipitous, auctioned off the oil leases for millions of dollars.

Subsequently Alyeska, a consortium of seven oil companies, ordered great quantities of pipe from Japan that now is piled in Alaska, costing additional millions to protect and maintain.

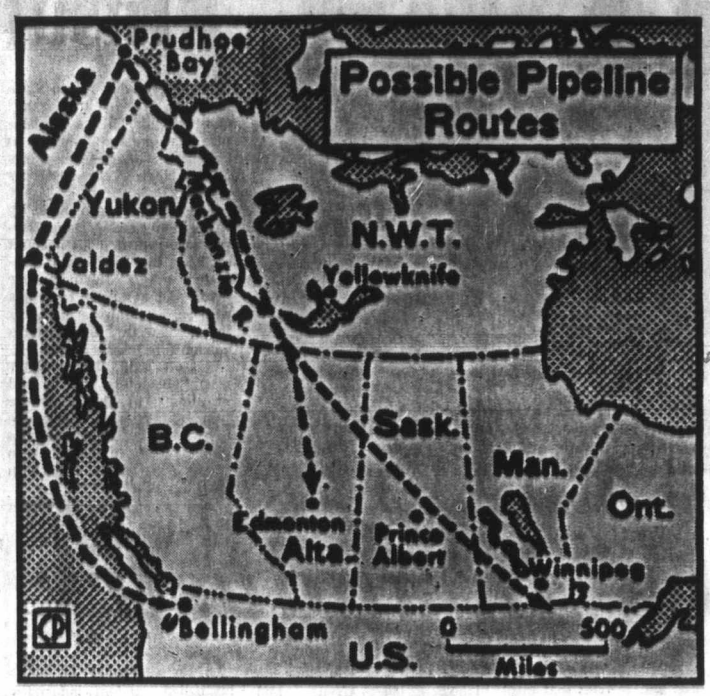

They had hoped to start this spring to build the 800-mile line down through Alaska to the year-round port of Valdez.

An interior department report on the plan seemed satisfied that all was well.

Then, suddenly, everything went wrong for proponents of the Alaska line.

At public hearings on the preliminary interior department report, critics put up a good case in charging:

The northern environment would be severely damaged; the claims of native people in the area had not been properly considered; the threat of earthquake in that area was a vital consideration that had been largely overlooked.

And the fleets of tankers required to move the oil from Valdez would be a horrible pollution threat to the British Columbia and northwest U.S. coastal areas.

The new interior secretary, Rogers Morton, said there would be much more study before his department would approve the idea. There would certainly be no Alaska pipeline this year.

Not only that, he made clear federal permits could not be granted at least until Alaska native land claims were settled by congress, a matter thrown out in the last congress and likely to take several months before being resolved.

If the claims go before the courts subsequently, the delay could be much greater.

Meanwhile, although the Canadian government has not formulated a firm policy on the issue, several ministers have coupled their fears for the B.C. coast with the suggestion that a Canadian line down the Mackenzie Valley to the U.S. Midwest be considered.

Others, including the influential William D. Ruckleshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, have said this idea should be given thorough study. Morton agrees.

Representatives of the seven oil companies have an appointment in Ottawa next week to discuss the matter, despite the fact they are already so deeply committed financially to the Alaska plan.

Still, among the points that caught the notice of those who think it will be a long time before any pipeline is built, is the fact that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has declined to offer the Canadian route outright as an alternative.

Also, some observers here suggest that many of the environmental hazards inherent in the Alaskan North would apply equally to the Canadian North.

And the pumping of hot oil through a pipeline embedded in Canadian permafrost is no less of a threat than that in the permafrost of Alaska. Certainly, say these observers, the Canadian route would require as much study — and attract as much skepticism — as the Alaskan route.

And, as the New York Times points out, there is no need to rush it:

"The oil of Prudhoe Bay cannot be, in quantity, a substitute for oil imported from other parts of the world. It is additional oil that the U.S. may require in time, but that time is not this year or next.

"Until there is no longer a question of how it may be transported with the least damage to the earth, there is every reason to leave it safe in its Arctic vault against the day of need."

Terrorists Hoping Hated British Will Take Over Political Control

Agony of Northern Ireland Grows Worse

By RICHARD RESTON, from London

The nightmare of Northern Ireland is once again a major preoccupation here. The agony of Ulster grows worse, not better. It is a region where Catholics and Protestants continue to live in fear of one another, where terrorism is the rule rather than the exception, where British troops patrol the streets with edgy trigger fingers.

Now the crisis has deepened and once again time is running out. The events of recent weeks threatened to move beyond the control of politicians who argue for moderation.

The prime minister of Northern Ireland, Maj. James Chichester-Clark, arrived here Tuesday for urgent talks with British Prime Minister Edward Heath, Home Secretary Reginald Maudling and Defence Minister Lord Carrington.

They conferred against the backdrop of rising deaths and human tragedy in Northern Ireland. Shootings have taken the lives of six soldiers and two policemen in Belfast during the past five weeks. Three off-duty soldiers were shot in cold blood last week.

Gun battles between rival factions of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) are becoming more frequent. The danger of a violent backlash from extreme Protestants grows with each passing day.

And the political future of Chichester-Clark, a symbol of moderation, is now more uncertain than at any time since he has assumed power two years ago.

If there is further violence and bloodshed in the immediate days ahead, Chichester-Clark may not survive a no-confidence motion from within his own political party.

That vote is less than two weeks off. While it is not binding, any vote against him would leave the prime minister in an untenable position and might well lead to his resignation. The result would be a new and even more serious crisis in Belfast.

Clearly the meeting between Chichester-Clark and officials at the highest level of the British government provided an opportunity to study the political and security alternatives open to both London and Belfast. The conference also no doubt dealt with this to shore up Chichester-Clark's increasingly fragile political base.

About the only option open to London is to improve on security measures already in effect in Northern Ireland.

This may mean the dispatch of additional troops to supplement the 8,000 British soldiers already there. It probably means a tougher military response to the wave of shootings, rioting, arson and bombings.

Informed sources also talk of the need to strengthen military and security intelligence efforts against extremist elements, particularly IRA activists.

There are more extreme suggestions to rearm the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the region's police force. And even to set up a special armed militia to deal with security matters when British troops are not available.

As a last resort, and particularly if the political and security situation continues to deteriorate, the British government could take over direct control of Northern Ireland. But this is precisely what the IRA wants and what the British government wishes to avoid.

Direct control from London eliminates the impartial military buffer between Catholics and Protestants. It puts Northern Ireland under a distant parliament and turns the course of history back to the earlier decades of direct Irish-British confrontation.

Such a decision would leave the British as the chief IRA target. Ultimately, the IRA wants a complete British withdrawal from the North and an end to the partition of Ireland.

That IRA objective is possible only if London decides in the final analysis that the cost of anarchy and violence is too great to continue a British presence in Northern Ireland.

Britain, Canada Once Physically Linked

We Drifted Apart

By IAIN MacLEOD, FROM London

Evidence in the geological relationships between Scotland and Nova Scotia and between Newfoundland and Ireland shows that at one time Canada and Britain were neighbors.

Some 350 million years ago Scotland split and its northern half slid 60 miles west, forming the Great Glen. Nova Scotia, 3,000 miles away now, has a split in its rock structure with exactly the same characteristics. Rare zinc and silver deposits in Newfoundland have been compared with mineral deposits in Ireland. The conclusion: The two deposits were once part of the same bed.

In a recent study of the formation of the continents, Prof. D. H. Tarling, a geology university lecturer, concluded that North America and Britian were part of a huge land mass also including most of Asia and Europe.

"Gondwanaland," as this gigantic continent is termed, was separated by the Mediteranean from "Laurasia" — another mass of continents made up of Africa, South America, Antarctica and Australia. The Pacific Ocean covered the remainder of the earth's surface.

Prof. Tarling, in his book Continental Drift, claims the Atlantic Ocean did not exist at that time and was formed only when the Americas and Europe drifted apart.

The breakup of Gondwanaland and Laurasia was caused, Tarling writes, by mammoth earthquakes and volcanoes. The continents, made of relatively lightweight rock about 10 miles thick, rest on heavier material which forms the ocean floors. When warm gases rise from the earth's core, this thinner layer cracks.

Tarling says in his book, published in Canada by Clarke, Irwin, that continental drift occurs when molten material pours out of the earth's core and pushes the cracks further open. Drifting continues even today.

That the Atlantic is a young ocean is not a new theory. Alexander von Humboldt, an 18th century explorer, wrote: "The Atlantic Ocean was essentially a huge river valley whose sides had been separated by the great volume of water over which Noah's Ark had sailed."

Geologists may ignore the biblical reference but generally accept that the Atlantic originated as a river valley caused by the cracking process and has grown as continental drift took place.

Conversely, the Pacific Ocean is diminishing. As the Americas drift slowly towards the Far East — at a rate of six centimetres a year — the Pacific's floor is folding back inside the earth.

Tests indicate that the temperature of the Atlantic is in fact 10 times warmer than that of the Pacific, suggesting molten material is still emerging on the Atlantic's bed while the Pacific's floor contracts.

Prof. Tarling writes: "In another 50 million years, East and West will meet as the Rockies and the Andes come into contact with Japan."

In Europe, Tarling speculates that "the Mediterranean will disappear as the Alps and the Atlas mountains are further compressed to form an even more massive mountain chain through this area."

The study of continental drift helps the discovery of mineral deposits. Geologists, given data on the environmental structure surrounding a mineral bed in one continent, can trace a parent bed in that continent's neighbor during the existence of Gondwanaland and Laurasia.

"An example is the occurrence of diamond fields in West Africa and their counterparts in northeastern South America," Tarling says.

He believes that on a longer term, the study of continental and ocean floor movement can lead to an understanding of the formation of mountains and the mechanisms of earthquakes and volcanoes.

"Such an understanding is essential to the prediction of natural disasters and possible methods of controlling such tremendous forces."

Psychology with Elegance

By DAVID F. BELNAP
From Buenos Aires

With a blast of its old-fashioned horn, the Model T Ford clatters to a stop in an upper middle-class residential neighborhood of this capital, the largest in the southern hemisphere.

Although it's high noon, the man behind the wheel is dressed in top hat, white tie and tails.

Carrying a dignified black briefcase, the driver alights and knocks on the door of the nearest house, asking with stony-faced politeness if this is the home of so-and-so.

The first house called on is never the right one. Nor the second. Nor usually the third. By the time he reaches the home he's seeking, he invariably has a retinue of chattering children and other neighborhood onlookers pointing the way.

Someone usually asks: "Who are you? From television?"

"No," he replies, "I'm a bill collector."

The word passes quickly through the crowd and a respectable audience is generally at hand when he reaches the target house.

Once the sought-after homeowner answers his door, the top-hatted gentleman simply hands him a card and leaves. The card bears the name of the collection agency and the legend: "Home collection of delinquent accounts."

The name of the agency is never news to the embarrassed debtor. For months, he's received the customary series of dunning letters and telephone calls urging him to pay.

"Now comes the really dangerous part—the drive home!"

"Our soup-and fish visitor is the last resort, and it usually works, especially among those who can pay but make a business of not doing so because they know legal proceedings are bothersome and take forever," according to Mario Novillo Diaz, one of the agency partners.

"Our best allies are wives and families who intercede to avoid the shame of a second visit from the man in the top hat," he added.

Novillo Diaz and his partner, Adolfo A. Cabello, employ seven white-tie collectors.

Average age of the collectors is 35 and qualifications include a poker face, a cool disposition and impeccable manners. Their instructions are explicit: they must never enter a house nor engage in arguments with debtors — nor find the right address on the first try.

"It's publicity that finally persuades the hard case to pay," said Novillo Diaz. "Admittedly our method is rough — but rough with elegance."

Japanese Car Firms 'Insulted'—Barrett

Trade Minister Waldo Skillings was branded "arrogant" and "stupid" in the Legislature Tuesday for claiming no Japanese manufacturer wants to establish a car assembly plant in B.C.

The charges were made by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett who repeated his account of how the NDP had contacted major Japanese car firms and arranged meetings with representatives of one of them, Toyota, in Victoria earlier this year.

Barrett said the minister was "absolutely stupid and insulting" to the Japanese representatives by claiming in a press statement that he didn't want to meet them because he deals only with "the top echelon."

The NDP leader added neither Skillings nor Premier Bennett had answered his letter to them passing on a Japanese request for the government to co-operate on a feasibility study for the project.

Barrett charged the premier is "interested only in playing cheap politics and keeping one of his hacks in the cabinet." The NDP leader was ordered to withdraw the reference to the minister as a hack, and did so.

He told the House a Japanese manufacturer has established a "union shop" car assembly plant in Sydney, Nova Scotia, initially employing 48 and producing 1,200 cars. The market for Japanese imports in B.C. has grown in the space of a few years to 6,000 cars and on the basis of meeting this need, Barrett argued, a similar plant located in this province would employ about 200.

Charging Skillings with showing "temper, aggressiveness and lack of sensitivity," Barrett asked: "Is this government prepared to co-operate on a feasibility study requested by these Japanese interests"

"I don't answer iffy questions," Skillings retorted.

The minister said the Toyota representatives who visited Barrett in his office earlier this session were only "trouble shooters" for the company in Canada and had no real authority.

"I have spoken in the past to two major motor companies in Japan and I am very familiar with their plans. At no time has either company suggested they intend to have a small plant in B.C. like the one they have in Sydney, Nova Scotia," Skillings said.

'We Are Captives' in Industry

Failure of the government to provide jobs in the province and the emphasis which has been placed on allowing foreign capital investment in natural resources were attacked Tuesday in the House.

Opposition members complained that while the government boasted about an 8,000 increase in the number of jobs made available during the past year, the number of people looking for work had increased by 44,000 in the same period.

The comments came during debate on the estimates of the industrial development, trade and commerce department.

The minister, Waldo Skillings said he was concerned with promoting and developing industry in the province that could stand on its own feet.

"Not for us the development of hothouse industries that are not competitive even though they receive substantial infusions of public funds," he said.

Recent industrial-resource projects have directly created or will create 8,500 new jobs in the province, he said.

"It must also be recognized that such expansion of the economic base leads to further stimulation of our secondary and service industries," said Skillings. "For every new job created in the industrial resource sector, between two and three additional jobs are created in related fields."

Not so, said Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound).

"When you talk about one job in primary industry producing two or more in secondary industries, you fail to take into account that most of those jobs are in foreign countries," said Williams.

He disagreed with Skillings' statement that foreign capital investment assures British Columbia of captive foreign markets.

"We can't move an inch in copper ore, iron ore, or coal because they control it. We are the captives of other countries' industrial development."

Williams wanted to know how many young people will be leaving school to enter the labor market this year — and how many during each of the next five years.

He said without that information, the minister's information about the number of new jobs created in the province was meaningless.

"Mr. Minister," he said. "You have been criticized for spending $10,000 on travel. I do not agree — I can't imagine a place far enough away for you to go.

"The youth of B.C. are interested in quality jobs — that is what industrial development means," he said.

Skillings undertook to get the figures for Williams.

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) asked the minister to consider five proposals:

- Aid, either financial or consultative for development of municipal industrial estates;
- A look at the possibilities of secondary and tertiary processing of natural resources, such as paper;
- Insisting that basic industries such as the forestry industry use more men rather than using more capital;
- The possibility of public rather than private enterprise in some industries. He pointed out that a foreign public industry — a state-run conglomerate from Finland — is developing forest resources in this province;
- Development of what he called random industries such as provision of consultants to foreign countries.

Skillings said if industrial estates were set up, there was no guarantee industry would move in — there is still a lot of dormant land in the Prince George industrial estate.

He said he saw no possibity of setting up public industry, preferring to attract foreign capital to the province.

Skillings said a steel industry could not be set up in the province because the population is too small and the cost of shipping steel would be too high.

Liberal leader Pat McGeer accused the government of having a plan to make the people of the province into "hewers of wood and drawers of water," and of ignoring inventiveness and sophistication.

They had, he said, an obsession with natural resources instead of encouraging new inventions, which were potentially greater money-makers than the natural resources.

He suggested an invention fair and an annual prize for the best invention.

The estimates of Skillings' department, totalling $3.2 million, were approved by the House after six hours and 35 minutes of debate.

New Scale for Garnishee Exemptions

Maintenance Rule Changes Sought

New legislation changing some major ground rules for maintenance of wives and children and the garnisheeing of wages in B.C. were introduced in the Legislature Tuesday.

The proposed amendment to the Wives and Children's Maintenance Act makes a woman legally liable for the support and maintenance of her children.

A man is to be legally liable for the support and maintenance of his children and also those of his wife from her previous marriage.

In cases where a couple has lived in common law for one year or more the man will be liable for the support and maintenance of children he fathers.

In addition, the Family Court will be empowered at the time a maintenance order is made to decide questions of legal custody and access to children which formerly had to be decided by the B.C. Supreme Court.

In cases where a maintenance order is to be varied, rescinded or enforced, testimony of husband and wife may be heard at different centres in the province. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said the move was proposed to avoid unnecessary travel and loss of work time.

In cases of default of a maintenance order, the bill states that a warrant may now be issued to compel attendance at the hearing.

The name of the Family and Children's Court of British Columbia is also changed to Provincial Court: Family Division.

All garnisheeing procedures currently existing in legislation are consolidated in proposed amendments to the Attachment of Debts Act.

Peterson said the province is 'breaking new ground" by proposing the establishment of a new scale of exemptions for garnisheeing orders based upon a percentage of wages earned.

Under the bill, 70 per cent of wages due shall be exempt from any garnishee order ensuring a single person will have a minimum of $100 a month and someone with one or more dependents at least $200 a month to live on.

In cases of alimony, separation payments, or maintenance orders the exemption applies to 50 per cent of any wages in exess of $600 a month, but in no cases shall the exemption allowed be less than $100 a month.

The courts will also be authorized to release a garnisheeing order and, in its place, introduce a system of instalment payments to relieve a debtor of a succession of garnishee orders with attendant costs.

The bill moves to prevent dismissal of any employee because his employer has been served with a garnishee order.

Proposed amendments to the Small Claims Act allow the introduction of some practices now followed only in Supreme Court including third party proceedings.

Carpenters Picked Best New Group

NEW YORK (AP) — Bridge Over Troubled Water, by Simon and Garfunkel, was the big winner Tuesday night as 43 Grammy Awards were given for the best recordings of last year.

It won as best single record of 1970, best long-playing album, and best song, the later award going to composer Paul Simon.

The Grammy awards, given for the 13th year by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, were seen on television for the first time, from Los Angeles.

The Carpenters, brother-and sister ballad singers, were named best new artists of last year. They also won as the best contemporary duo or group vocalists for Close to You.

Best vocal performance Grammys went to Ray Stevens for Everything Is Beautiful, which he wrote, and to Dionne Warwick, for I"ll Never Fall in Love Again. She won once before, with Do You Know the Way to San Jose?

Best rhythm-'n'-blues vocal performance awards went to B. B. King, winning for the first time, with The Thrill Is Gone, which he wrote, and Aretha Franklin for Don't Play that Song. This is her fourth straight win in this category.

It was the first win for both top singers in country music, Ray Price, with For the Good Times, and Lynn Anderson, for Rose Garden.

Marty Robbins was the writer of My Woman, My Woman, My Wife, judged the best country song. He won a Grammy in 1960, when his El Paso was named best country single.

John Lennon, Paul McCartney and George Harrison won the Grammy for best film score for Let it Be, the first time Beatles had won in that category. McCartney and his wife accepted it.

Flip Wilson had the best comedy recording, The Devil Made Me Buy This Dress. He broke a six-year winning streak by Bill Cosby.

Jazz awards went to Bill Evans for Alone, for small group or soloist with small group, and Miles Davis, large group, for Bitches Brew. Davis hadn't won a Grammy before. Evans won in 1963 and 1968.

Best country performance by a duo or group was If I Were a Carpenter, by Johnny Cash and June Carter.

Best country instrumental performance was Me and Jerry, by Chet Atkins and Jerry Reed.

Best recording for children was Sesame Street.

Recordings eligible for a Grammy Tuesday night were released between Nov. 2, 1969, and Oct. 15, 1970.

Big-Time B.C. Sports 'Falling to Americans'

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) charged in the Legislature Tuesday that a "branch of the U.S. entertainment industry" is taking over big-time sport in B.C.

Medicor International, the Minneapolis-based company which owns and operates the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, Macdonald said, has recently expressed an interest in acquiring B.C. Lions football club.

Whether or not they succeed, the NDP member said, this company under tight foreign control is "buying up the franchises of young Canadians" whom it treats as mere chattels and not in the best interests of sport.

"Brutality in sport, the introduction, as is bound to come, of drugs and amphetamines, that's the name of the game," Macdonald said. "But I say to you in all friendliness don't let that failure go to your head."

"Brutality in sport, the introduction, as is bound to come, of drugs and amphetamines, that's the name of the game," Macdonald said. "But I say to you in all friendliness don't let that failure go to your head."

That Calgary oilman Frank McMahon and his associates had turned down an opportunity to obtain the Vancouver NHL franchise for a reported $6 million.

"You're a rainmaker that's failed, Mr. Minister," Macdonald said. "But I say to you in all friendliness don't let that failure go to your head."

Brandt Slips In Balloting

BERLIN (LAT) — Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats suffered heavier than expected losses in West Berlin elections Sunday, and the opposition immediately branded the results a demonstration of public lack of confidence in the government's ostpolitik.

The socialists saw their traditional majority in the West Berlin chamber of deputies slashed to an operating minimum.

Judicial Fences Going Up

Full-time provincial court judges are to be barred in future from engaging in any other business or occupation.

Proposed amendments to the Provincial Court Act, introduced by Attorney General Leslie Peterson in the Legislature Tuesday, say every full-time judge "shall devote himself exclusively to his judicial duties" except when designated to perform "the duties of a public office" by the attorney general.

Peterson later told reporters he could not cite specific cases, of judicial moonlighting, but added the government felt there "could be a conflict of interest" where a full-time judge was engaged in either law practice or any other business on the side.

Copper Stocks Lead New Market Advance

VANCOUVER — Copper stocks were up in an almost unbroken line as the red metal continued to rise in price (53 cents a pound in New York).

Brenda up .30, Lornex up .30, Granduc up .85; Gibraltar up .25; Bethlehem up .62½; Western Mines up .25 and Churchill, up .15 were among those to benefit.

Industrials were mixed with Growers B, up .10 at 3.40 and Doman active but unchanged at 8.00, Cominco was up 1.00 and Canadian Javelin .75. Captain International, Pace and International Hydrodynamics were among the losers.

Ballinderry rallied .25 to 2.80 in the oils.

Volume Increases

TORONTO (CP) — The market posted its fourth successive advance as share turnover reached the highest level in more than three months.

At the end of the busy session, the exchange's industrial index had climbed 1.01 points to 183.56, its highest point since April 9, 1970. Base metals also advanced to the highest point since Nov. 27 of last year.

Home and Cygnus Corp. Ltd. shares resumed trading. Home A lost ⅝ to 26¼ and Home B 1⅝ to 26¼. Cygnus A was down 25 cents to 4.90. Cygnus B, the voting shares, advanced ¼ to 6⅞.

Seagrams rose ⅝ to 53⅝ and United Keno climbed 15 cents to $5.20.

Among other advancing stocks, Falconbridge was up 2 to 146, Jefferson 1¼ to 11⅞, Aimco Industries 1 to 14⅞, Pembina 1 to 30¼ and Pine Point 1 to 30.

National Trust was up 1 to 26, International Utilities 1⅛ to 44⅛, Falconbridge 1 to 145 and Canada Steamship Line 1 to 32¼.

Alberta Natural Gas was up 1 to 24½, Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. ⅛ to 28, Rothmans ⅛ to 13 and Dominion Lime ⅛ to 7⅞.

Shell Canada was off ⅝ to 34⅝, Dominion Sugar ½ to 35, Southam ½ to 59, Pacific Petroleum ⅛ to 31, Peoples Stores ⅝ to 11⅝, Trust General ⅛ to 18⅝, Domtar ¼ to 14⅝ and CPR ¼ to 67⅞.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce dropped ⅛ to 22⅛.

Institutions Buy

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices soared to their highest point in more than 1½ years as volume hit near-record levels.

At the closing bell, the Dow Jones average had climbed 6.44 to 914.64. This was its highest peak since June 9, 1969, when it stood at 918.05.

Volume was the fourth highest in its history at 22,270,000 shares.

The tape was running two minutes late at the close.

Brokers said institutional trading was responsible. The NYSE index of 1,200 common stocks rose 0.27 to 55.71. Airlines, rails, mail order-retail and rubber issues revealed no pattern. Motors were off. All other stock categories were up.

Records for 1971

MONTREAL (CP) — Industrials, utilities and the composite index continued to climb in light trading setting new records for 1971.

Smaller Banks Outstrip Giants

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Two of the smaller chartered banks have done better than their bigger rivals in the first quarter of the current bank fiscal year.

While the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Toronto Dominion Bank increased their net earnings during the three months ended Jan. 31, the big three — the Royal, the Montreal and now the Commerce — have shown declines.

Latest to report is the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce which had an after-tax balance of revenue of $13 million (38 cents a share) against $17,600,000 (49 cents) in the corresponding quarter of 1970.

While total revenue rose $4 million to $198 million, expenditures rose even faster by $14 million to $170 million.

"This decline," said the bank, "arose from reductions in interest rates on loans and short-term securities, offset only in part by lower rates payable on deposits, which resulted in a narrowing of interest margins."

No provision was made to provide appropriations for losses, as these can be fully determined only at year end.

The wide difference in the banks' performance in the first quarter is shown by the gain in net earnings of 23 per cent by Nova Scotia compared to the drop in balance of revenue of 27 per cent by the Commerce, both in relation to the corresponding quarter a year ago.

Even the experts are puzzled by the uneven performance.

Direct Shipment

When the Pacific Great Eastern completes its 420-mile extension to the north in 1974, Cassiar Asbestos Corporation will be able to move its asbestos to market without transhipment.

The PGE extension will tap the Dease Lake area, where Cassiar Asbestos has its mine and processing plant.

Ever since the Cassiar mine opened in 1954, it has shipped its asbestos 375 miles by truck to Whitehorse, then by White Pass and Yukon railway to Skagway, Alaska, where it was loaded aboard White Pass ships for sea transport to Vancouver.

The PGE will take the asbestos directly to Vancouver and the main continental railway system.

Cassiar also has an asbestos mine at Clinton Creek in the Yukon, and it will continue to be served by White Pass.

Arctic Well

Panarctic Oils is planning to start drilling an exploratory well on Ellesemere Island to test what is believed to be the largest convex rock fold in the Arctic.

The location on Fosheim Peninsula is about 10 degrees from the North Pole on Canada's most northern island. Sedimentary structure in the area is estimated to contain 6,000 feet of potential hydrocarbon sand.

The well will go down 14,000 feet.

Trading Banned

The B.C. Securities Commission has ordered a stop on all trading in the shares of Silver Mark Mines Ltd. of Vancouver.

Silver Mark shares have been trading recently in West Germany. In Vancouver they trade over-the-counter and the recent price range has been $3 to $3.65 a share.

The company holds properties in the Yukon and British Columbia, and has an option on another property in the Yukon. It also has oil and gas leases in Southern Alberta. The action of the stock, its financial statements and status of its properties are given as reason for the commission's action.

Interest Drops

The Bank of America, largest in the United States, dropped its prime interest rate to 5¼ per cent Monday, following the example of the New York giant, Chase Manhattan.

Most of the other U.S. banks have contented themselves with a drop of a quarter-point to 5½ per cent.

The Bank of America also cut its conventional home mortgage lending rate to 6¾ per cent, and brought personal savings account interest to 4 per cent.

The Bank of America added that its prime rate had dropped by 3¼ per cent since last March.

Bourassa Woos Wall Street

NEW YORK (UPI) — Quebec premier Robert Bourassa told the money men of Wall Street Tuesday that electricity from Quebec, for sale in New York, would be a good investment.

Bourassa, continuing his campaign to attract more foreign investment to the province, first visited New York last September to meet with leading financiers, and tell them of the vast potential for electric power projects in the Hudson's Bay area.

He followed up the first visit Tuesday, telling a gathering of important financial leaders that they would do well to invest in Hudson's Bay power plants. Once the surplus can be sold to power-starved New York state, helping ease New York City's recurring power shortages.

Funds Spark CTV Probe

HALIFAX (CP) — The strained financial condition of the CTV television network has prompted a study by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, Pierre Juneau, commission chairman, said Tuesday.

Juneau said in an interview that both the commission and the CTV network have hired private consulting firms.

He said that financial pressure has resulted from demands for improved programming, greater Canadian content and extension of CTV service to communities that now receive only the CBC.

The commission itself has encouraged extension of the service and ordered CTV to increase Canadian content.

The CTV system is a co-operative owned by member stations.

Finances of the CTV network were brought up earlier Tuesday by Alan Waters, president of CHUM Ltd., Toronto.

He said the CTV network is "having a good look at itself because the direction it is going in right now isn't a healthy one from the financial point of view."

Waters was participating in an application by CJCH Ltd., Halifax, a CTV affiliate, to the CRTC for permission to acquire CJCB-TV, Sydney, N.S. CHUM is a majority shareholder in CJCH Ltd.

James Packham, CTV vice-president, said he did not want to comment on Waters' remarks.

Capozzi Warns Insurers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social Credit MLA Herb Capozzi said Monday that the automobile insurance industry must find solutions to some of its problems because government are running out of political alternatives.

The Vancouver Centre MLA was speaking to the annual convention of the Insurance Agents' Association of British Columbia.

In a later interview he said governments might step into the industry if companies don't solve problems on their own.

Ottawa Could Obtain Majority Shares In Home—Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no constitutional barrier to the federal government acquiring majority shares in Home Oil of Calgary, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

But he again declined to give any details on how the negotiations between the government and the oil company are proceeding.

Replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, the prime minister said it was not in the public interest for him to spell out how Ottawa would acquire the majority shares if that was the final outcome.

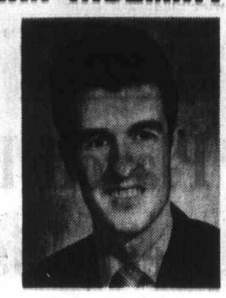

There is no doubt the government could buy the shares but the money for the transaction would be subject to the approval of Parliament.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) asked why the government had not followed the same procedure in blocking the sale of Denison Mines by simply stating it must remain in Canadian hands?

Trudeau replied that under the constitution, the federal government had jurisdiction over uranium. This was not so in the case of petroleum.

Bucyk Gets 50th Goal In 11-4 Rout of Wings

John Bucyk, a 35-year-old winger who never scored more than 31 times in any of his previous 15 National Hockey League seasons, Tuesday night became the fifth player to get 50 NHL goals in one season.

He shot No. 49 in the first period and reached 50 in the third period as Boston Bruins impressed the largest crowd in Detroit history — 15,547 — by handing the Red Wings an 11-4 trimming.

Bucyk also had an assist to bring his point total to 104, which is 35 more than he managed in any other season.

Another big gainer Tuesday was Phil Esposito, who scored his 62nd goal and added three assists to boost his lead in the individual point race to six points over teammate Bobby Orr.

Orr managed only one of the 26 Boston points, drawing an assist on a third-period goal by Ed Westfall.

Other Bruins who made progress towards significant accomplishments were Ken Hodge, who got his 41st goal to reach 97 points, and Wayne Carleton, who got Nos. 16 and 17 in his effort to become the 10th Bruin to score 20 times this season.

Rocket Richard, Bernie Geoffrion, Bobby Hull (four times) and Esposito preceded Bucyk to the 50-goal plateau and Esposito, Hull, Gordie Howe and Orr were ahead of him in getting 100 points.

Bruins have now won 11 games in a row, a streak in which they have scored 73 goals, and can clinch their first championship in 30 years by winning three of their remaining nine games.

While they rushed towards the East Division championship, Montreal Canadiens were beaten on St. Louis ice for the first time when the Blues rocketed to a 6-2 triumph, Vancouver Canucks took a 7-4 beating from Chicago Black Hawks and Minnesota North Stars bounced Los Angeles Kings, 7-2.

Bobby Hull and rookie goalkeeper Gilles Maloche, playing his first NHL game, bothered Canucks the most.

Hull scored once and assisted four times while Maloche performed a few miracles in the third period while stopping 20 of 22 shots.

Hull now has 90 points and nine games left in which to become the third player to own two 100-point seasons.

By KEVAN HULL

Burly Bruce Cowick was one of the few Cougars feeling fit Tuesday night, and it was a fortunate thing for the Victorians in their B.C. Junior Hockey League game with Chilliwack Bruins.

Cowick exploded for three goals to continue his late-season splurge as the Cougars struggled to a 4-2 victory before a "Kids Night" crowd of 1659.

The Victorians were missing three regulars — goalkeeper Ed Forslund, defenceman Randy Bock and forward Scott Munro — with the flu and coach Mike Shabaga said that at least five other players shouldn't have been playing.

Chilliwack, a much improved club since Orv Litchfield took over coaching duties in mid-season, was unlucky in not having taken a first-period lead despite being outshot, 5-9.

Mike Randolph failed to score on three outstanding chances, hitting the left goalpost on two occasions and being robbed by Darryl Fedorak on a breakthrough.

Cowick gave the hosts a surprise goal nine seconds before the period ended, his fast-rising shot bouncing in off goalkeeper Dave Maynard's arm.

Bruins struck back quickly in the second period with Ron Greschner and Randolph scoring 11 seconds apart on defensive lapses.

BRUCE TIED IT

However, Cowick slipped in the rebound from a Gerry Bond point shot for his 30th goal of the season to tie the score and Chris Riddell deflected a Dale Pennock shot before the period ended for what proved to be the winning goal.

Cowick completed the scoring midway through the final period, again tapping home a rebound from a Bond drive.

Cougars end their regular schedule on Saturday night when they meet the second-place Vancouver Centennials.

In Tuesday's other game, Penticton Broncos regained first place in the Okanagan Division from idle Vernon Essos by downing the visiting Kelowna Buckaroos, 6-4.

Trail Hosts Junior B Hockey Final

The best-of-three B.C. junior "B" hockey semi-final series between Trail Smoke Eaters and Victoria Cubs has been shifted to Trail.

Originally scheduled to begin at Memorial Arena Friday night, the series will now get under way Monday in the interior with the second game to be played Tuesday night. If a third game is needed, it will be played Wednesday night.

Winner of the series will advance to the best-of-three final for the provincial title against Kamloops.

Duncan Legion Rink Making Strong Bid

CHARLOTTETOWN — B.C., represented by a Duncan rink skipped by Gordon Stewart and including Harry Dewar, Frank Fraser and Al Carlson, won twice on Tuesday to move into a tie for the lead in the national Legion curling championship.

FIVE-WAY TIE

The Vancouver Islanders created a five-way tie for the top spot on Tuesday's second draw when they bested Jim Ferguson, 7-5, to knock the Saskatchewan rink out of the unbeaten class.

It was a 5-5 tie starting home and Stewart made good use of the last-rock edge by taking out shot rock and staying for two.

That pulled him even with Saskatchewan, Alberta, New Brunswick and Ontario, who also finished the day with 3-1 records.

Earlier Tuesday the Duncan rink eased by Newfoundland, 12-7, for its second win in three games.

Saskatchewan defeated Prince Edward Island in the morning to run its record to 3-0 and take the lead when Alberta's Gordon Killam was beaten, 10-6, by Ontario's Earl Jesse.

Alberta bounced back on Tuesday's second draw to share the lead, edging Mac Scales of Manitoba, 11-10, in an extra-end game.

Stewart gave much of the credit for the upset win over Saskatchewan to vice-skip Dewar.

"He made many clutch shots," Stewart said. "He's the key to our team."

Playoff Basketball Near Island Level

Gordon Head Vikings edged Hampton, 29-28, at Mount View high school Monday to advance against Boys' Club in the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association's midget boys' playoff.

Boys' Club, unbeaten this season, have two chances to end the double-knockout tournament, meeting the Vikings tonight at S. J. Willis junior high school and, if another game is needed, Thursday at Mount View.

The winner will advance to the Vancouver Island tournament, a five-team, double-knockout tournament Saturday and Sunday at University school.

In the bantam boys' playdowns, Lansdowne, which is also unbeaten this season, walloped Metropolitan Trojans, 62-28, to advance to the final. The Victoria winner will enter the Island championship, a six-team, double-knockout event at Nanaimo Apr. 3 and 4.

GIRLS' FINAL

Yarrows advanced to the bantam girls' finals with a 23-18 win Monday over Esquimalt and must beat undefeated First United Saints Thursday and Monday to earn a spot in the Island final Mar. 27 and 28 in Duncan.

Six teams will participate in the double-knockout Island championship.

Loss Ends It

Henry Cooper, who regained the title twice after relinquishing it, was dethroned as European and British heavyweight boxing champion on Tuesday when Joe Bugner, 21-year-old Hungarian-born naturalized Briton won a 15-round decision in London. "This is my last fight, you can't go on forever," Cooper said after the fight. Now 37, Cooper finished strongly and the decision was booed by many of the 6000 fans.

Frazier Ordered To Hospital Bed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Frazier was admitted to hospital Tuesday after complaining he felt weak.

An initial examination by Dr. James Giuffre showed Frazier had high blood pressure.

JUST RELAXING

A hospital spokesman said the world heavyweight champ is "just relaxing." He has been ordered to receive no visitors.

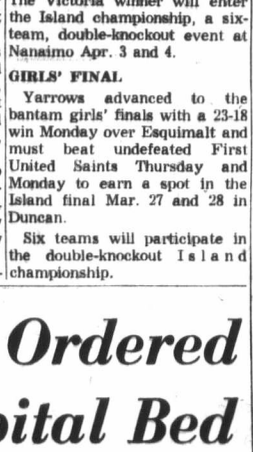

In a statement the hospital said the champion was hospitalized "for further rest and definitive studies" after blood tests were found to be "not satisfactory." The spokesman said no time limit was set for Frazier's stay.

Dr. Guiffre earlier said Frazier's high blood pressure resulted from the recent schedule of appearances he has been keeping and had no bearing on Frazier's 15-round battle with Cassius Clay in Madison Square Garden last Monday.

The champion appeared at St. Luke's Hospital to show films of the fight to children in the wards.

While entertaining the patients, Frazier complained of "weariness" and was taken to Dr. Giuffre.

The physician dismissed earlier rumors that Frazier has sustained a detached retina in his left eye as a result of the Clay fight.

Dinner Guest

Dave Cutler, who is spending the off-season teaching school in the Victoria area, has accepted invitation to be Sports Celebrity Dinner, scheduled next Tuesday at Empress Hotel. Place-kicker for Edmonton Eskimos of Canadian Football League, Cutler will be in group which includes hockey greats King Clancy and Babe Pratt, CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur, manager Jackie Parker and coach Eagle Keys of B.C. Lions and bowler Helen Duval.

According to the Solunar Tables calculated for this area, the best times for hunting and fishing today and tomorrow will be as follows (Times shown are Pacific Standard Time):

Eagle Named After Obstetrician And Delivered in Tompkinsville

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

"Where's Turkey Neck Bend?"

It seemed like such a simple question.

Eagle Keys, head coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders, had just moved to British Columbia Lions in a similar capacity and the news release stated:

"Eagle was born in Turkey Neck Bend, Ky., and graduated from Western Kentucky State College."

SEARCH STARTS

That was when someone asked the question.

Maps in the all-embracing library at The Canadian Press didn't show it. It was not listed in the United States post office directory; nor in Encyclopaedia Britannica and not in the prestige-hung Times Atlases.

The U.S. consulate in Toronto didn't know, but promised to check. They couldn't find it.

The public library had no record of it.

TOUGH ONE

Canadian Press men in Washington took up the hunt, and correspondent Rod Currie reported:

"Covering the State of the Union address was a snap by comparison."

His search took him through the telephone company, the postal service, the U.S. Army mapping service, the American Automobile Association and the U.S. geological survey.

HELPFUL

To help out, he also asked about the town of Bugtussle because Keys has been known to state:

"Actually, I come from Bugtussle, but I always say Turkey Neck Bend because who ever heard of Bugtussle?"

Currie's search took him to Capitol Hill, to the office of Representative Tim Lee Carter, a Republican whose congressional fifth district in Kentucky includes Monroe County.

"Keys is telling the truth," Carter said. "Turkey Neck Bend and Bugtussle do exist."

Carter, a physician, says he knew Keys "as a young lad, playing a good game of football for a local team before he went off to college."

BEND IN RIVER

Turkey Neck Bend, he says, got its name from a bend in the Cumberland River that "resembles the bent neck of a turkey." He says there are about 100 persons living there —"it has fine, river-bottom land."

With those clues, the geological survey people came up with maps to show both. On these, Turkey Neck Bend looks more like an area than a town or village. Bugtussle is about 10 miles to the west.

But the more you research, the more you begin to suspect that the Eagle has been having everyone on all these years.

For instance: His father was not a bird-watcher and thus inclined to name him Eagle. The name came from a Dr. Eagle who delivered him 47 years ago.

And his yarn about his five sisters—Robin, Bluebird, Jaybird, Redbird and Crow? Pure fiction, but a great lead-in to his punch line:

"Crow, she's the ugly sister."

Actually, the girls are named Madge, Faye, Colleen, Laverne and Gloria.

Some of the other stories about him are true, however.

He won't wear red on game day, he carries a hardened hickory nut as a good-luck charm and he's a virtual virtuoso at playing the spoons.

But — and you have to take the bad with the good when you set out to research a point — he did not come from Turkey Neck Bend.

PARTIAL TRUTH

Oh, his father comes from there, all right, but Eagle Keys was born in Tompkinsville, Ky.

And before someone asks "where is Tompkinsville," let it be known that Tompkinsville is right there on the map — about half way between Turkey Neck Bend and Bugtussle.

House Numbers System Rings Bell

LONDON (UPI) — A 43-year-old British housewife, who confessed she knows nothing about soccer, Tuesday received a record $771,456 on the soccer pools.

Mrs. Joan Wilkes, mother of two teenagers scooped the pool with an investment of a little more than $2.40. It was the biggest win ever by one person, although a syndicate of eight men last week shared $852,000.

Mrs. Wilkes said she has been doing the pools for four years but has no real system and uses "lucky numbers" which correspond to matches on the entry list.

To qualify for a prize, a pools player must correctly forecast eight drawn matches from a list of more than 50 fixtures. Only eight games ended all square in last Saturday's English and Scottish program and Mrs. Wilkes had them all in her entry.

"I simply use the number of houses in which members of my family and friends live," she said. "And I always use my own number, 35, and my father's lucky number, 13."

Mrs. Wilkes' husband, Don, runs a demolition business in Leamington Spa, Warwickshire. He had no suggestion on how to spend the windfall.

"I expect I shall just carry on with the business," he said.

Alec Merriman

The provincial government may be forced to abandon its planned trout and steelhead hatchery site at Abbotsford because of local opposition to the use of ground water.

If the hatchery site is abandoned it would set the steelhead propogation back three to four years. This is a program which is being designed to supply the steelhead planting needs of lower mainland and Vancouver Island streams for the next 15 to 20 years. Expanded hatchery facilities are planned to include capacity for propogating 200,000 steelhead and more than $100,000 has been spent so far in proving up a water supply at Abbotsford.

"We have established the basic criteria for this hatchery to provide a production of 60,000 pounds per year to supply the needs of the lower mainland and Vancouver Island for the next 15 to 20 years," says Ed Vernon, chief of fisheries for the provincial fish and wildlife branch. "A six-man planning team has been established with the department of public works to carry out the engineering designs required."

Additional temporary facilities are scheduled at Abbotsford this year to produce some 25 to 30 thousand steelhead.

Meanwhile, federal fisheries also seems bent on entering the steelhead hatchery field.

Fisheries minister Davis recently said that if salmon hatcheries are as big a success as expected . . . with benefit cost ratios of at least three to one and producing five to 10 times as many fish as under natural conditions . . . more money will be made available from Ottawa.

"These larger sums will be invested in more hatcheries up and down the coast. It may also result in our doing more work on steelhead salmon and building hatcheries on some of our B.C. rivers as well," he said.

Existing plans call for five coho and chinook hatcheries to serve the Gulf of Georgia. A start has already been made on a hatchery on the Capilano River. Next is expected to be a hatchery on Cold Creek, which flows into the Quinsam.

Goldstream hasn't yet been ruled out as a possible third hatchery site to serve the lower Island and with the new reservoir at Sooke Lake, the water board should be able to supply plenty of water from the Goldstream Lakes. It is still a possibility that a ground water supply may be available along the Goldstream.

Provincial fish and wildlife biologists are also looking at the Goldstream and are conducting a mapping and survey program on the Goldstream to establish methods of estimating minimum stream requirements for steelhead populations.

"This work will be extended to other streams as methods are developed," says Vernon. "The results will put us in a better position to persuade the water rights branch to preserve streams in a viable condition for steelhead.

Vernon was explaining the projects that will be carried out with money raised from increasing the steelhead punchcard to $2, from 25 cents, effective this month.

* * *

Surveys are being made of the spawning areas and the fishery for steelhead in the tributaries of the Skeena and Lakelse Rivers, including Kispiox, Babine, Bulkley, Morice and Copper Rivers. This will provide basic information for the formulation of regulations and other management practices aimed at preserving the runs of large fish in these northern streams.

Also being surveyed are the Dean River steelhead fishery and spawning grounds to obtain information for management and regulations. New protective regulations will be brought into effect in 1971 on the Dean and the Atnarko Rivers.

Studies are being continued of the steelhead population of the Big Qualicum River to obtain further information on the requirements of steelhead in streams.

Data will continue to be collected by steelhead questionnaires and punchcards and information so gathered will be used to protect natural steelhead populations from degradation by industrial developments, logging, highway construction, pollution.

Biologists are conducting a search for early-maturing winter-run steelhead, which are required for a successful propagation program.

Considerable headway has been made, especially on Vancouver Island, in educating forest companies in logging practices which will minimize damage to streams and in the recognition of the need for green strips.

At Monday's Victoria Fish and Game Club meeting Howard English appealed to members for suggestions for stream rehabilitation and pollution control programs that could be undertaken by the 400 students expected to be employed on summer work projects on southern Vancouver Island. Work, he said, could include stream rehabilitation, planting of streamside cover, beach cleanups, etc. The Amalgamated Conservation Society is preparing a brief of suggested projects and needs ideas by the end of this week. Accommodation for workers and projects that don't require too much equipment or supervision are prime requisites, English explained. He also made a strong call for protection of streams close to town before subdivisions take over. Strips, at least 100 feet wide, should be provided along all streams, he said.

Betsy

Chance for Rest Given by Coach

MONTREAL (CP) — Betsy Clifford has been suspended from Canada's national ski team for the remainder of the season for violating curfews, Ed Champagne, manager of the team said Tuesday.

Champagne said Miss Clifford was suspended by Al Raine, the team's alpine director, and Peter Franzen, coach of the women's team, after last weekend's competition at Aspen, Colo., where the U.S. national competition was held.

Miss Clifford placed third in the women's giant slalom, fifth in the downhill and was disqualified in the slalom event at the Aspen competition.

John Clifford, father of the young skiing star, said that there's no doubt in his mind but that Franzen doesn't want Betsy with the team.

He added that before Betsy could possibly rejoin the team she would have to have another coach.

Eight-Enders Mark Spiel

Tuesday brought the second eight-ender in two days in the women's inter-club curling bonspiel.

Ruth Jackson of the Victoria Curling Club, who has Muriel Mayhew, Netta Service and Thelma Rolston as her lineup, defeated Shirley Burley, 15-7, by scoring all her rocks on the final end in action at Esquimalt Municipal Centre. The rinks were tied at 7-7 after eight ends and the time limit made the ninth end the last. Mrs. Jackson had to make a last-rock draw for the eight count.

On Monday at Playland, Helen Griffin, Joan Lopeter, Sally Sowerby and Doris Wicket combined for an eight on the fifth end against Gladys Blowey.

Canada, Scots 2-0

World Curling Tied

By AL McNEIL

MEGEVE, France (CP) — Canada and Scotland remain the only two unbeaten rinks entering today's third round of the world curling championship.

Don Duguid of Winnipeg, defending world champion, scored his second straight victory in Tuesday night's second round, as he led his rink to an easy 9-5 win over the United States, represented by Dale Dalziel's rink from Edmore, N.D.

SWEDEN ROUTED

Scotland, meanwhile scored a surprisingly easy win against Sweden when Jimm Sanderson led his Edinburgh foursome through a game that included a pair of four-enders.

Sanderson's 11-3 win came at the expense of Kjell Grengmark of Karlstad.

Tuesday night's results left Sweden, Norway, France and Switzerland grouped behind the Canadian and Scottish foursomes with one win and one defeat, while the German and United States crews had 0-2 marks.

In first-round games Tuesday afternoon, Canada handled Switzerland 9-5, Scotland edged Germany, 7-6, Sweden handed France a 13-3 pasting, and Norway defeated the U.S. 6-5 in a game that went two extra ends.

The 14-end contest was the first of its kind since the world event went into its current sponsored format in 1968.

JUST AS NEEDED

Duguid was never in trouble in either of his games and his experienced crew that includes lead, Bryan Wood, second Jim Pettapiece and third Rod Hunter, apparently went only as hard as was necessary to win both games.

Sanderson, the 24-year-old Scottish farmer, said he found the keen ice, which threw some of the other rinks for a loss, to his liking in his second-round victory against the Swedes.

"We got our draw game going early in the evening round," Sanderson, a left-hander, said. "We were loosened up considerably after being tensed up in the afternoon."

Duguid took advantage of an early lapse by the Americans to jump into a 3-0 lead after one end.

After his first-end three, the Winnipeg skip added singles in the fourth and seventh, before counting two in each of the ninth and 11th ends.

Dalziel's crew found itself handicapped throughout the contest by its inability to complete takeout shots and on other occasions failed to make key draws that would have kept it in the game.

Rams Bowl Over Totems Win Berth in B.C. Final

Mt. Douglas Rams earned a berth in the B.C. High School Boys' basketball championship by beating Victoria Totems, 53-46, in a playoff game Tuesday at Victoria High School.

The Rams will join Island-champion Oak Bay and runner-up Belmont Braves in the 16-team provincial tournament at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum Mar. 24-27.

Totems finished third in the eight-team Vancouver Island tournament at the University of Victoria last weekend while the Rams were fourth. The teams did not meet during the tournament, giving Don Puddy's Rams the right to challenge for the third Vancouver Island spot in the B.C. Championship.

For Totems, who have been to the B.C. final 18 times, it was their first miss since 1967, when they were upset by Cowichan in the first round of the Island tournament. It was the result of that game which prompted officials to allow a challenge for third place.

Rams fell behind, 21-27, in the first half but came back in the second half with Jim Duddridge scoring 13 of his 15 points.

John Jenner, who had 11 points to hold Rams in the game in the opening half, finished with 19 points.

Victoria finished second in league play and Mt. Douglas were third. Both teams won home games against each other, Totems taking a 61-43 decision at Victoria High Jan. 12 and Rams winning, 51-47, at Mt. Douglas High on March 4.

MT. DOUGLAS (68) — Jim Duddridge 15, John Jenner 19, Greg Gardner 8, Brian Wright 11, Bill Ringley 9, Sid Chow 1, Ron Smith 2, Mike Reimer, Doug Archibald, Bruce Coulter, John Evans, Harry Hitchman.

VICTORIA (66) — Ian Scott 10, John Griffin, Sean Flynn, Garnet Moen, Pete Grabowski 8, Bruce Bingham, John Roodhof 8, Kevin Townsend 8, Allan Martyn 4, Jim Nemec 7.

Queen Holds To Rule

SCHIPHOL, The Netherlands — Queen Juliana of The Netherlands was searched like all passengers before she boarded a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines plane for Montreal at Schiphol Airport.

"All passengers are being checked, why not me?" said the queen, who insisted no exception be made.

The queen flew to Montreal to pay a week-long visit to her youngest daughter, Princess Christina.

□

PARIS — President Jean Bedel Bokassa of the Central African Republic has accused the French government of planting a bogus teen-age daughter in his household as part of a plot to overthrow him. The plot was discovered when Martine, his true daughter whose mother was Vietnamese, was found lugging bags of cement in a Saigon suburb. They have since been reunited.

□

SANTIAGO, Chile — Ex-president Eduardo Frei's family name means "free" in its Germanic origin but he won't be entirely free until May 3. Under Chile's constitution, former presidents cannot leave the country until six months after leaving office without approval of congress, giving the successor time to uncover any past skullduggery.

MILAN, Italy — The penitant kneeling before Rev. Roberto Zaccaria made a bombshell confession. The man pulled a grendade from his pocket and handed it to the Roman Catholic priest before disappearing. Zaccaria called police, but said the secret of the confessional forbade him from disclosing the man's name or what he had said.

□

VANCOUVER — Angelo Mosca, professional wrestler and professional football player with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, was acquitted on a charge of creating a disturbance following a roadside dispute with police in the west end area of Vancouver. The judge ruled that because a crowd gathered, it did not necessarily mean a disturbance was created.

Trial Ordered

Crux Bid Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — Albert Gilbert Duncan Crux of Vancouver must stand trial on all charges brought against him by the Crown alleging the publishing of false information in connection with Diversified Income Securities Ltd. and fraud, the Supreme Court of Canada has ruled.

In a unanimous decision, three judges rejected a motion by lawyers for Crux asking the court to set aside similar rulings by B.C. courts. The decision was released Monday.

Crux said that the charges in question infringe an agreement signed between Canada and the Bahamas under which the accused was returned to Canada.

Under the agreement, Crux was brought back to Vancouver to fight certain stated charges. The agreement said he was to be returned to the Bahamas before other charges could be placed.

More Peking Agents In Canada? 'Obviously'

OTTAWA (CP) — Establishment of a Chinese embassy here recently will mean the location of more agents in Canada, RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgitt said Tuesday.

He was asked by Harold Stafford (L—Elgin) whether he maintained his 1969 position that the new embassy would mean an increase in subversion.

"That was not quite my statement." Commissioner Higgitt replied before the Commons justice committee.

He said he had been asked at a news conference whether a mainland Chinese embassy would result in more agents in Canada.

"The obvious answer had to be yes."

When Stafford pressed the point, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer intervened to say an improper picture of relations with Communist countries shouldn't be developed as relations were excellent.

Stafford asked whether Higgitt thought the threat of Soviet espionage had increased or decreased.

The commissioner replied that this was a value judgment but he could say it was less than it had been at times in the past.

Stafford asked whether Higgitt is aware of the Praxis Corp. which he said had been given $68,000 in federal funds to promote dissent.

At the poor people's conference last fall in Toronto, Mr. Stafford said, the corporation had been the organizer and the conference had passed controversial resolutions, including one indicating support for the FLQ.

"Certainly I'm concerned," the commissioner said. "I am as concerned as every Canadian is."

MPs' Vote For Raise Predicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says members of Parliament are likely to vote themselves a salary increase of almost 40 per cent within the next few weeks.

The newspaper says in a story from its Ottawa bureau that MPs will probably do away with recommendations of the recent Beaupre commissions, which independently studied the question of MPs' salaries, and give themselves a 4 per cent a year pay raise.

This would be retroactive to 1968, the year members last received an increase.

High Dam 'Lesser Evil'

SEATTLE (AP) — Raising the height of Ross Dam is the only practical and economical means available to meet increased demands for electricity, a Seattle City Light consultant said Tuesday.

"The impact on the environment of raising Ross Dam is probably less than the impact of other practical hydro-electric alternatives and much less than the practical alternative of thermal plants," said Dr. Herschel Jones.

The state ecological commission opened a two-day hearing on the municipal utility's proposal to raise the height of the dam 123 feet. The increase in the Skagit River hydro-electric project would expand the reservoir by 8,320 acres and extend into British Columbia south of Hope.

Gordon Tongue, Seattle Cement Company executive who resigned as commission chairman, said the increased electricity from the project would help industry become more self-sufficient.

The commission heard testimony in Seattle Tuesday and scheduled a second hearing in Mount Vernon today.

Dr. Patrick Goldsworthy, president of the North Cascades Council, said 16 conservation groups opposing the dam "have agreed to grant us a portion of their testimony time to be polled for use by eight expert witnesses who will speak on behalf of all those organizations opposing the raising of Ross Dam."

The B.C. government does not plan to appear at the hearing, said wildlife director Dr. James Hatter, because government officials believe there is little they could really contribute by appearing.

Dr. Hatter said the decision was made in consultation with recreation minister Ken Kiernan.

Cup Challengers Receive Warning

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yacht Club has given seven challengers, including one from Canada, until June 1 to set up elimination trials for selection of a challenger for the America's Cup in 1973.

The club announced Tuesday that it had sent a cable to the challengers stressing urgency in settling on the site, dates and elimination procedures.

The action came after a breakdown in negotiations with the Royal Thames Yacht Club of England and conversations with the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron of Australia.

Both said they could not accept responsibility for holding the trials.

The other challengers are the Royal Perth Yacht Club of Australia; Yacht Club D'Hyeres and Societe Nautique de Marseid Cercle de la Voile de Paris, both of France, and the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

NYYC TO CHOOSE

If the challengers can't agree among themselves on an elimination series, then the New York Yacht Club said it would be obliged to select a single challenger from the seven.

The U.S. is holder of the trophy, which it has never lost in more than 100 years of ocean racing.

The American defender, Intrepid, beat the Australian challenger, Gretel II, last year. Gretel previously had eliminated France in preliminary trials.

The U.S. is expected to stage trials to select the 1973 defender.

Last Chance

Final registration period for players interested in participating in the Saanich Minor Lacrosse Association will take place between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday at Hampton and Braefoot parks.

General Strike Aim in Dispute

By DON COLLINS

A dramatic call for a two-hour general strike Friday in support of Sandringham Private Hospital strikers is almost certain to be rejected at tonight's meeting of the Victoria Labor Council.

Sources expect small but vocal support for the move.

The best bet is that any one of several alternatives to a general strike will be recommended to delegates by the labor council's executive.

If by some chance the work stoppage does come, it would be only the second general strike in Canadian history. The other was the Winnipeg general strike of 1919 which had disastrous results.

Casualties

Casualties included several labor leaders and the cause of labor itself, which veteran unionists say was "set back 25 years."

The idea of a short-lived general strike on a local basis came in the form of a resolution at a labor seminar on organizing Sunday.

The seminar was conducted by Jim Beaubien, a member of the Hospital Employees' Union and the man credited by unionists with successfully organizing private hospital workers last year after a number of large unions showed little interest.

Beaubien helped form the Private Hospital and General Service Employees' Union, which includes the 28 women who have been on strike against Sandringham since last Sept. 30.

Spearhead

The new union has since become a Victoria local of the giant Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Beaubien is spearheading the push for the general strike as a means of bringing the plight of the Sandringham workers to public attention on a broad basis. He says that if labor is serious about living up to some of its high ideals it will support the move.

"The principles of labor will be put to the test here," he said Tuesday night.

Beaubien said the subject of Sandringham came up at the seminar and "it got down to the question of what kind of action had been taken."

Two Hours

Out of this discussion the Sandringham Action Committee was formed and the resolution drawn up for a general work stoppage that would take place between 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Friday, with a mustering of forces at Centennial Square at 2 p.m. and a march to the hospital at 1650 Fort.

The resolution refers to a "denial of basic rights" by the employer, and "exploitation of cheap labor."

Organized labor in Victoria and the Greater Victoria Council of Churches have supported the women's bid for a first contract with the contention that their strike is a fight for social justice.

They have accused National Nursing Homes, which manages the hospital, with refusing to bargain.

Some Skeptical

Beaubien says he is aware some labor officials are skeptical about the idea of a general strike.

"The general strike is something that doesn't happen very often because labor is afraid always to take the risk of looking like a fool if the move isn't really supported," he said.

"But I think this kind of attitude prevents an awful lot of things from happening that should happen."

The Sandringham Action Committee would have the labor council call on all its affiliate unions, its 12,000 membership and "all people concerned" in the community to join the stoppage.

Guest Only

Beaubien is a former delegate to the labor council, but he can appear tonight only as a guest since his own union is no longer affiliated. The Hospital Employees' Union lost its seat in the official house of labor because it is a breakaway from CUPE, an affiliate in good standing. Internal problems caused the decision to break.

There has been some thought that union locals wouldn't have sufficient time to call meetings and hold votes in connection with a general strike Friday. There is also the belief the labor council wouldn't act without permission of the Canadian Labor Congress.

And no one concerned believes the CLC would sanction such action.

No one is offering comment, but it appeared likely the labor council's executive could recommend tonight that unionists show their support by donating one hour's pay each to the strikers, or that a march to Sandringham be held on a Sunday so that a general strike wouldn't be necessary.

Youth Release Decision Today?

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Prosecutor John Macintyre was given 24 hours Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to answer a motion for the immediate release — on his own recognizance — of a 17-year-old male charged with attempted murder.

The motion was made by Cecil Branson, who was appointed last week through Legal Aid as defence lawyer for the 17-year-old, charged after Fiona Fay Boucher, 2, of 643 John, suffered a skull fracture in an incident at her home on the night of March 4-5.

At the root of the problem is the Jan. 29 ruling of Vancouver Provincial Court Judge John Anderson that 17-year-olds should not be heard in adult courts but in juvenile or family courts. B.C. has appealed the ruling but no decision has been announced yet.

Between Jan. 29 and the first court appearance March 6 of the 17-year-old charged in the Boucher case, all persons of that age charged in adult court were released on their own recognizance in sums ranging from $100 to $500 pending the Anderson appeal decision.

But on March 6, Macintyre asked temporary Judge Harold Alder to assume jurisdiction because he understood the accused was 17, the circumstances were "aggravated" and the victim was two years old. Alder did so by refusing bail and putting the case over to March 8.

Judge William Ostler then said the 17-year-old could not be held in a detention centre for children due to his age and the nature of the offence. He ordered a remand in custody or on surety bail with proper safeguards to ensure his return for trial.

Branson attacked the assumption of jurisdiction March 6 by Alder. He noted Macintyre had stated he "understood" the boy was 17 and said, in effect, no evidence was presented as to the boy's age nor any finding made by a judge as to his apparent age.

The lawyer claimed, after a complex argument in which several legal precedents were cited, that a ruling on apparent age is needed in a borderline case such as this one.

"I make no admission as to the age of this accused," said Branson, adding that because the court had already taken jurisdiction, it was too late for the crown to attempt to prove that same jurisdiction and therefore too late for a judge to make a finding on apparent age.

He also used the defence argument which caused Anderson to throw out the adult-court age of 17 last January. In brief, it says the only age reference in the Juvenile Delinquents Act that applies mentions 18, not 17.

Macintyre asked the judge for time to prepare a reply to the Branson motion and the controversial matter was set over to this morning for his argument — with indications that, in the intervening 24 hours, many transcripts would be typed and many legal precedents studied.

Drowning Inquest Hears Survivor

'Wave Washed Me Back Down'

"I tried to grab something to get out, but another wave came and washed me right back down. Then the second time I came up I got hold of a piece of rock and began scrambling out."

Andrew Charlie, an inmate at the William Head minimum security penitentiary in Metchosin, was telling a coroner's inquest Tuesday night of his struggle to save himself after falling into the sea while trying to save another prisoner who had slipped on rocks by the shore near the prison.

The jury at the inquest ruled the second man, Jack Curley, of Tofino, drowned accidentally in the incident Thursday.

Charlie told the court he, Curley, and four other inmates of the prison went for a walk along the shore to watch the waves break about 5 p.m. They were walking single file, he said, with Curley in the lead, when Curley slipped down a rough rockface.

Charlie said he was able to grab Curley, but found nothing else to hold onto, and a wave washed both of them down the rocks into the sea. He touched bottom, he said, and after being washed down once more was able to get out with the help of one of the others, Harry Dick.

When he was out of the water he saw Curley "floating around on top of the water, trying to swim," he said, and he and another prisoner, Bert George, told him, by words and gestures, to take off his heavy prison coat. Curley was able to do so, he said, but was not able to swim in to shore.

He and two of the others then went to the main prison building for help, he said, but by the time they returned Curley had disappeared.

Another prisoner who had been on the walk, Gilbert Redan, told the inquest that he had tried to throw a piece of wood into the water to help Curley, but the wood was so heavy and waterlogged he was unable to. The sixth person with them, John Peters, had been going to jump into the water to try to save Curley, he said.

The jury recommended that lifesaving apparatus, particularly lifebuoys and ropes, be placed at strategic locations around the prison shoreline.

The inquest was shown a videotape film of the area where the drowning took place, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said later it was the first time such film had been shown in a Greater Victoria inquest, but he felt it to be most useful.

Purpose of the videotape, made Tuesday morning by Sergeant William Foster of the RCMP training and development branch in Victoria, was to help the jury "visualize more clearly" the scene of the accident, he said.

The film, broadcast on a closed circuit television, showed the rocks where the men had been walking and the place where Curley's body was recovered.

RCMP Constable Kenneth Baber who commented on the film, also told the inquest that Curley's body was recovered Friday morning by a diver from CFB Esquimalt. The body was lodged in rocks, about 30 feet out from shore in water about 20 feet deep, he said.

On Thursday night at 5 p.m. when the prisoners left for their walk, the winds were about 40 miles an hour, he said, and he estimated the waves at being six to eight feet high.

William Head superintendent Gamaliel Milner told the inquest that Curley, 24, had come to William Head in October from the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster.

Struggling Environment 100 Offered Grant Up to $5,000

The Vancouver Foundation has advised Environment 100 that it will make a grant of up to $5,000 available to the group if it can meet certain basic conditions.

In a letter received from the foundation Tuesday by Dr. Marc Bell, chairman of the citizens' committee that is working to establish an environmental information centre here, the foundation said it would provide $1 for every $2 raised by Environment 100.

The money to be raised would have to be collected after the date of incorporation, so monies already collected will not be included, and the maximum size of the grant will be $5,000.

Another condition stipulates that the centre would "indicate willingness to work with other agencies such as public health units without duplication of service."

The foundation's letter said this term would have to be met because "we envision your information centre being a co-ordinating centre for information rather than operating in isolation."

The third term stipulates that the citizens' committee must establish a permanent responsibility for the board of governors that is planned to run the centre.

Susan Laubenstein, one of Environment 100's two part-time employees, said the foundation's decision was a major step for the struggling information service.

"This is tremendously encouraging," she said. "A foundation is at least willing to give us a chance to prove ourself."

She said there would be no difficulty meeting the administrative or functional conditions as the incorporation process is well advanced with a constitution that does give responsibility to the board of directors.

The service has already been working with other agencies and does not duplicate work, she said.

"What is really urgent now is to get on and collect the $10,000 so the foundation will give us the $5,000 grant," she said.

Abortion Foes Meet Today

Young Rent Farm

Saanich municipal council lands and housing committee decided Tuesday to authorize the municipal solicitor to draw up a rental agreement that would enable the Victoria Youth Council to rent a three-acre plot of farmland from the municipality for $1 a year.

Committee members decided they did not want to force the VYC to submit to any additional terms than would be required from any other tenant.

Chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said, however, the purpose of the project, which is to provide jobs and food, is so interesting that she would like the council to submit quarterly reports on its progress.

Thetis Lake Park Loses Bid for Improvements

A bid by Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage to spend $35,000 on improvements at Thetis Lake Park was blocked Tuesday by Council's Group B committee.

Aldermen agreed that the park's general appearance is deteriorating, but they disagreed on who should pay for improvements.

Savage, chairman of the parks committee, said the city-owned park could be "a beautiful place "If the city only spent a few bucks on it."

Ald. Hugh Ramsay told committee as long as the city owns the park, it should also look after it.

When it was suggested that other municipalities share in the cost of maintaining the park, Ramsay said that approach had been tried before — without success.

"The worst thing that can happen is to see the park run down just because a number of municipal politicians can't get together. We should go ahead with the project," he said.

Plans called for construction of new change rooms in the park. To finish the job before the summer season, council's approval was needed next week.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said he will get in touch with the mayors of Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay to get a commitment for financial assistance in park maintenance cost.

Ald. Harold Olafson told committee the cost of running the park was too heavy a burden on Victoria taxpayers. Ald. Ove Witt inquired if the improvements could be done over two years, but he was told that suggestion was not feasible.

Olafson, Witt and Haddock voted against the motion to approve the $35,000 expenditure; Ramsay and Savage voted in favor.

After the vote, Ramsay said, "You may as well kiss this project goodbye for this year."

To offset maintenance cost, council decided last year to install a parking ticket dispensing machine at the park's entrance. When the matter was finally passed, it was too late to install the machine.

Traffic Engineer Dave Campbell told the Colonist Tuesday the meter would be installed by June 1. The proposed fee for entering the park by car is 25 cents.

Complaints About Eaton's Mall 'Legitimate'

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock says the city may soon reach an agreement with the T. Eaton Company regarding a section of Broad Street used by the firm.

Complaints from Hillside Shopping centre merchants regarding the exclusive use of a parcel of public property by a private firm, the mayor said, were "Legitimate".

"They have a point, and I hope we can settle this matter soon," Haddock told the Colonist Tuesday.

He wouldn't give any details, but he said that Eaton's "might be asked to lease or rent the property in question." The firm had also indicated it may remodel the entire Victoria store.

In a letter to council this week, R. I. Lawson, on behalf of the Hillside merchants, said the association wishes to protest Eaton's use of Broad Street between View and Fort.

"As taxpayers to the city of Victoria we respectfully point out that we see no reason why tax revenues to which we contribute are used to assist one of our major competitors and would further propose that the area in question be opened up to traffic and that its use as an unsightly truck-loading area be discontinued," the letter stated.

"This would immediately improve the appearance of the area and rectify what we consider to be an unjust competitive advantage."

The mayor said it should be emphasized that Eaton's didn't originate plans for the mall. The company agreed after the city made the initial suggestion.

Eaton's officials weren't available for comment Tuesday, but they indicated earlier that a number of improvements were scheduled for this year. They also had said that the firm would be willing to negotiate with the city for possible lease or purchase of the property in question.

Males Need Help

Neptune girls practise procedures

BRISBANE (Special) — It's an odd fact of life at Tallebudgera, a holiday resort on Queensland's Gold Coast, that more young men seem to narrowly escape drowning than anywhere else in Australia.

Stranger still, comparative statistics show that young women, older men and children, rarely encounter the same difficulties while swimming.

In fact, over the past 10 years, the sight of young men floundering in the placid waters of Tallebudgera Creek has become the cue for outbursts of convulsive laughter from onlookers in the know.

Not so though, from a bevvy of bronzed young women on the beach who have come to regard such situations with a certain amount of scorn.

"It's not really funny," says 23-year-old clerk Bronwyn Leadle, captain of the Tallebudgera Neptune Ladies Lifesaving Club.

"We have to rescue everyone in apparent distress including young men just trying to attract our attention."

Yet Bronwyn wryly admits that if the club's high membership turnover rate through marriage is any barometer, at least some of the "drowning victims" must survive the inevitable tongue-lashing from their rescuers.

Tallebudgera itself, a quiet family holiday area, almost mid-way along the 20-mile-sun-drenched strip of beach resorts in southern Queensland which are the meeca for more than two million Australian and overseas visitors each year.

The Neptunes, in their trim nylon costumes and colorful caps, voluntarily patrol the creek's sandy shores each weekend from November to May to protect its many hundreds of swimmers.

Over the years, club members have rescued scores of people, including children, spearfishermen, and skin-divers — and have not lost a life in the patrolled area.

In other nearby parts of the creek though, several people have drowned in swift-flowing currents and deep holes.

The girls are fully qualified still-water lifesavers with specialized training in reel and line rescue techniques normally used in surf lifesaving.

They are also proficient in resuscitation, first aid, and water ski rescue.

Usually, the complete training schedule takes up to six months of rigorous work before a girl becomes a fully fledged member.

The Tallebudgera Neptune Ladies Lifesaving Club is the only all female lifesaving club on the Gold Coast, and one of the few in Australia.

For the members, lifesaving is a serious business.

The girls, aged between 16 and 24, patrol the mouth of picturesque, yet often treacherous, Tallebudgera Creek where it empties into the rolling surf of the Pacific Ocean.

Restaurant Raters At Bat for Tourist

By DON COOK
Colonist—LA Times Service

PARIS — Back in the United States, the sports experts are handicapping the big league teams for the long baseball season ahead. Here in France, the experts are handicapping the restaurants for the long tourist season ahead.

The handicappers here are the Guide Michelin and the Guide Kleber-Colomboes, produced by competing tire companies, and a 7-year-old newcomer, the Guide Juillard. All are due to field their 1971 gastronomical scratch sheets shortly.

This year's Michelin, for most visitors to France the gourmet's bible, makes no changes in the four Paris restaurants and eight provincial restaurants to which it again awards its famous three-star ratings. That means "one of the best tables in France, well worth the journey."

The four in Paris are Maxim's, Lassere, the Grand Vefour and the Tour D'Argent.

But the Guide Kleber-Colombes, with a more literary and analytical style than statistics-only Michelin, disagrees with Michelm about what is best in Paris. It has knocked nine restaurants off the Red Rooster perch, its top award.

Kleber-Colombes agrees with Michelin about Maxim's and Lasserre in the top category, but it demotes the Grand Vefour and the Tour D'Agrent to its secondary rating, a Black Rooster.

Meanwhile, Kleber-Colombes adds Lucas Carton and Taillevent to Red Rooster rating, while also demoting to secondary rating Ledoyen, the Ritz and Plaza-Athenee hotel restuarant, the two Prunier restaurants and Laperouse, which lost its third Michelin star in 1970.

Michelin lists the Taillevent, Lucas Carton, Ledoyen and Laperouse among its 66 two-star restuarants, and gives Prunier's only one star. There are 556 one-stars — "a good restuarant in its class" — in this year's Michelin.

Kleber-Colombes also has initiated a "revelation" category of special out-of-the-way discoveries. In this class, it gives a special award to the Moulin de Mougins, a small inn converted from an olive oil pressing mill on the Cote De'Azur, in the hills about five miles behind Cannes.

There has been no advance peek at the 1971 Guide Jillard, which covers a great deal besides restuarants in a racy, chatty style.

Divorce Easing Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — The period of separation needed for divorce on the grounds of "marriage breakdown" should be reduced from three years to one, said a private member's bill introduced Monday in the House of Commons.

New Democratic Party member Andrew Brewin introduced the bill, which would permit couples to seek divorce on grounds of marriage breakdown after only one year of living apart. The present law requires three years' separation.

Brewin noted the shorter period of separation was one of the recommendations of the recent Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada.

Unless it receives the unlikely unanimous suport of the House, the legislation will join the scores of private members' bills that die on the order paper in every session of Parliament.

Corned Beef for Luck

Dorothy Wrotnowski

Potatoes, soda bread, mulligan stew and corned beef and cabbage are laid at the door of the Irish as being among their traditional foods.

So, today being St. Patrick's name day, we have a modernized corned beef and cabbage dish that is claimed to be as lucky as a shamrock.

This dish is really a variation, for although its main ingredients are corned beef and cabbage, it is served cold in a creamy mold.

Corned Beef and Cabbage Mold

Two envelopes unflavored gelatine, 1 cup cold water, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon Tabasco, 1½ cups mayonnaise or salad dressing, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, ½ cup chopped sweet gherkins, 1 cup chopped celery, 1 cup finely shredded cabbage, 1 can (12 ounces) corned beef, chopped.

Sprinkle gelatine over water in saucepan. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatine dissolves, four or five minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in salt, lemon juice and Tabasco. Gradually stir into mayonnaise in mixing bowl; add onion.

Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture is slightly thickened. Add sweet pickle, celery, cabbage, and corned beef; mix well. Turn into six-cup mold; chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with salad greens and cherry tomatoes.

Vivian Villo of Surrey is B.C.'s new Honey Queen. She was chosen for the title by judges Muriel Wilson, John Guilbault of Quebec and Judy Ruddell of Vancouver.

Fourteen-year-old Vivian converted a yeast bread to a baking powder cake for an original recipe. She also added cherries for color.

Sandra Reid of the provincial government agriculture department, home economics division, says that Vivian's Honey Tube Cake is really delicious, so maybe you would like to try it.

HONEY TUBE CAKE

Two cups flour, ¼ cup sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup shortening, ¾ cup liquid honey, 1½ teaspoons rum, 1¼ teaspoons vanilla, 3 eggs, 1 cup cherries, 1 cup chopped nuts.

Measure flour into bowl; add sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir well. Add shortening, milk, honey and flavoring. Beat for two minutes. Add eggs. Beat again. Stir in cherries and nuts.

Dough should be creamy. Spread in greased tube pan. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 60 to 65 minutes. When cooled, sprinkle with icing sugar and decorate with cherries and walnut halves.

□

Jerrilynn MacLean, a 17-year-old student of Victoria high school, was one of the runners-up, representing the Vancouver Island division.

Jerrilynn says she likes to cook — especially cakes and desserts. Her other hobbies are hooking rugs on a two harness loom, sewing, baseball and swimming.

Her winning recipe was for a peanut butter and honey loaf. Her original recipe follows.

PEANUT BUTTER-HONEY LOAF

One-third cup shortening, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup honey, ½ cup peanut butter, 1½ cups flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk.

Cream shortening, sugar, honey and peanut butter together. Add eggs, beat well. Sift dry ingredients together. Add alternately to creamed mixture with milk. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven, 350 degrees of 45 to 60 minutes.

The announcement of the winner of the Honey Queen title was made following a dinner at the Imperial Inn given by the provincial government for the Canadian Honey Council, the Canadian Honey Packers and the Canadian Association of Apiculturists.

Hubert Wilhelm, head chef at the Imperial, really excelled in preparing the menu. Or maybe he was just living up to his reputation, having recently been named Chef of the Year for the second time.

Everything had a touch of honey. Started with Honeycomb Fruit Cocktail followed by tossed green salad with fireweed dressing. Main course was Queen Bee pheasant with Spinach Florentine and straw potatoes, and dessert was Yellow Rock eclair and coffee.

Following the dinner, Willard Ireland, provincial librarian and archivist, introduced the Centennial theme in his speech, a concise history of the province in the last 100 years.

Charlie and Babe Warren; Leo Fuhr, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Honey Producers' Association, and his wife, Grace, and Jack Arnott, editor of the Canadian Beekeeping magazine, were at the table with me.

The Warrens are very knowledgable about honey — they should be, I guess, as they are the biggest honey producers on the Island. They have 1,700 bee hives on the island extending as far north as Gold River. But it still beats me how they could recognize their own honey even when mixed with other ingredients.

Maybe I should stop writing about food for a while. This thought flashed across my mind when I walked in to the Art Gallery Monday night for the annual dinner and meeting of the Municipal Chapter IODE. Win Blair greeted me with "Oh, so this is another of your eating nights." (Laughingly.)

But how can I? Today it is the Gorge Vale bridge luncheon at noon and the Victoria Branch of the National Secretaries dinner at the Strathcona in the evening.

Basford Favors Ad Study

OTTAWA (CP)— Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Tuesday he favors an in-depth study on advertising directed at children.

He was replying in the Commons health committee to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) who suggested the consumer affairs department and the Canadian Radio-Televison Commission make one.

McGrath was supported by Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway).

McGrath said complaints he made at a committee hearing last week about the effects of "hard-sell" televison advertising aimed at children had produced a response from across the country.

He said the advice of child psychologists should be sought about the effect of high-pressure sales methods on children.

The minister, a witness before the committee where his department's estimates are being examined, said there has been a great deal of concern especially about food and toy advertising directed at children. This had been getting attention from both his department and the CRTC.

Under the Combines Investigation Act, the consumer affairs department can take action against misleading or deceptive advertising. Basford said the CRTC has a strong authority to determine the kind of advertising done through the media.

A study by the two bodies might determine how and to what extent advertising directed at children should be regulated.

McGrath also complained that the department is not sufficiently advertising its services and information about consumer protection laws.

"There's not much point in having consumer protection legislation if the consumer doesn't know about it."

Basford said consumer information under his department had a 1970-71 budget of $177,000. The proposed figure for 1971-72 was $618,000.

"No doubt we should be advertising on TV and radio on prime time to reach people," he said. But this cost thousands of dollars.

Mrs. MacInnis said no real representatives of low-income consumers have been appointed yet to the Canadin Consumer Council and pressed the minister to rectify this. The council was set up in 1968 to advise the minister on consumer matters.

Virginity Not All Virtue

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said Tuesday virginity by itself is no virtue unless it is the result of free choice.

"To be a virtue, virginity must be freely chosen and not passively and unwillingly undergone as, for example, in the case of men or women who do not succeed in getting married or who are incapable of doing so," L'Osservatore said.

"To be a virtue, virginity — as indeed, Christian marriage — must be the fruit of a voluntary conscious and free decision."

Flags Fly for Crippled Children

Victoria Lion's Club's annual Easter Seal campaign got underway Monday morning with flag-raising at Causeway in front of Empress Hotel. This year's "Tammy" is 12-year-old Christine Paisley of 7445 Tomlinson Road, Brentwood. Funds raised during campaign, which includes number of special events until end of March, will go to B.C. Society for Crippled Children. Spokesman for society said all Easter Seals will be delivered by today. Christine suffers from spina bifidia, spinal disease, and attends school at George Pearkes Clinic.—(William E. John)

Free For Life

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I want to share with you what I consider a rare piece of wisdom. It is called Teenage Lament by Nancy Curtis:

The New morality — and freedom
From Classes — what a drag!
From Mom and Dad — always arguing.
From homework — senseless hours.
From discipline — useless!
From church — a bore.
From conformity — a hangup.
I'm my own woman now.
Made so by one decision.
One hour of love and pleasure.
Free now to look at my cheerleading sweater hanging in the closet, My books and basketball schedule resting on the shelf. My material for a prom formal — never made — as it sits amid the remnants.
Of the fabrics left over from my maternity tops.
My medals from band and choir, forsaken in the clutter of a jewelry box.
My friends passing by my window.
Laughing over the gossip column in the school paper
And giggling over who will be the next to experience
The new morality — and freedom
For cleaning — what a drag!
For him—always arguing.
For ironing — senseless hours.
For dishes — useless.
For cooking — a bore.
For sex — a hangup.
Oh God, if you are there,
Please let someone take this crying baby off my hands
And let my feet dance once more.
I am so old. And I was never young.

Dear Friend: I'm grateful for this touching poem. (Are you listening, students? The silence is deafening.)

□

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I will celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary in May. I've been saving for a trip to Hawaii for four years. A week ago I got a call from Boston. My mother passed away suddenly. My wife and I talked it over and she said if it was her mother she would go to the funeral but it was up to me. I decided against it and phoned my sister and asked her to send a bill for my share of the funeral expenses. She was very understanding.

This past week I received four letters from relatives who think I am some kind of animal. When my mother was alive I was very good to her. I saw no point in going that distance for the funeral. Was I wrong? You be the judge. — Campbell, California Black Sheep.

Dear Camp: If your conscience is clear and YOU feel you did the right thing, that should settle it. Some people attach great importance to funerals, grave-visiting, etc. Others do not. My personal belief is that it's what we do for the living that counts. Whatever we do for the dead, we really do for ourselves.

A Lovelier You

She Has Fine Pores

By MARY SUE MILLER

A mature reader writes: There are no pores in my facial complexion, except tiny ones in my nose. Consequently the use of treatment cream does not seem feasible for me. Without pores, how could a cream be absorbed? What alternative is there when the skin is dry? Mine is crinkly from dryness.

The answer: No matter how invisible pores may be to the naked eye, they are there and can be seen with a magnifying glass or mirror. A complexion without pores would be in serious trouble. Having no outlet, the oil glands and perspiration ducts would cause eruptive matter to form beneath the surface.

Actually, a woman is lucky when her pores are so fine that they appear non-existent. Never attractive, enlarged pores, trigger all manner of problems. Blackheads, for example.

Help for dry conditions does not depend on pore size. Products labelled for dry skin — cleansers, moisturizers, emollients, masks, powder base — bring relief via surface and sub-surface action. The degree of penetration may be argued, but is nonetheless real.

A regular skin care program brings about a dewier, smoother look. But, please note, "regular" is the key to success. Hit-and-miss applications are a waste of time.

Cadets Hit Road in Fund Drive

About 150 cadets from the Sidney 676 (Kinsmen) Air Cadet Squadron and Admiral Budge Sea Cadets will take part in a joint walkathon-cyclethon starting at 9 a.m. Sunday from Sanscha Hall in Sidney.

The walkathon-cyclethon is a friendly rivalry between the air cadets and sea cadets.

The route is about 20 miles long, starting at Sanscha Hall in Sidney, then southward into Central Saanich, Brentwood and ending at the VU33 waterfront, the headquarters of the sea cadets. Those in the cyclethon must complete the route twice.

The goal is to raise $15,000 for building, maintenance, new equipment and updating the air cadets and sea cadets facilities. It is hoped that as many people as possible will become involved either by walking, riding or as sponsors.

FOOT POWER

Members of Sidney council and RCMP, and North Saanich council and Central Saanich police force are expected to enter the walkathon.

Both cadet bands will play for the first mile after which their instruments will be picked up.

From Sanscha Hall the route will go along Beacon to Lochside Drive, continuing along the waterfront down Dencross Terrace, Collins to Mount Newton, along Mount Newton to Central Saanich Road, on to West Saanich Road.

Up West Saanich to Wallace Drive, then back to Mount Newton Cross Road, heading west to West Saanich and up to McTavish Road.

Walkers will proceed along McTavish to East Saanich Road, to the Airport Road, and on to the finish line by Patricia Bay.

Weather Observer Will Be Honored For Volunteer Job

Thomas Parkin, 7147 West Saanich Road, is being honored as one of 28 voluntary weather observers across Canada, to receive the 1970 Annual Award for Excellent Performance from the Canadian Meteorological Service. Each will be presented with an inscribed desk barometer.

Only observers who have served for 10 years of daily observations are eligible for this award. Parkin began measurements of rainfall and snowfall in 1960 at his home. He, and 300 other volunteers in B.C., provide twice-daily readings in return for the loan of official instruments, and the data is processed at Gonzales Observatory. Official presentation of the desk barometer will be made at Parkin's home.

"Up to 100 more volunteer observers are needed in B.C.," said John Knox, regional meteorologist. "There are still many areas from which we receive no data. New towns and settlements opening up are likely sites for valuable new stations."

Further information can be obtained by writing to the Regional Meteorologist, Canadian Meteorological Service, 739 West Hastings Street, Vancouver 1, B.C.

Sooke Festival at Belmont

Pepe Play Packs Lot of Hot Mexico

By BERT BINNY

The Sooke Schools Drama Festival moved over to Millstream elementary Tuesday night with two plays by the host school and one from Langford.

The large audience was treated to an evening of color, brightness and enthusiasm on the stage. One item in particular laid them in the aisles.

The program opened with Puss-in-Boots produced by Millstream under the direction of H. I. Banks.

"All the players were completely involved," said the adjudicator, Mrs. Gloria Peyton, "and they played it well."

This compliment was all the greater seeing that the players were all from Grades 2 and 3, ages about eight or nine.

Rod Beyer as Prince Phillip was "just about right for the part," Mrs. Peyton said, and she commended Allison Charlton as Puss-in-Boots for "in the main, a very good interpretation." Allison, however, has to watch rather carefully that she avoids speaking too fast.

Lori Hooper as an Old Woman did "a very good job" and Tracy Holotuk as Princess Anita "looked and sounded lovely AND she smiled." Technical difficulties seemed to detract from Gregory Korn's success as the Voice of the Ogre.

Millstream was right back again with Pepe and the Cornfield Bandit. The performers here were from Grades 6 and 7 and were about 11 or 12 years old.

"This was a bright production," the adjudicator said, "with a lot of hot Mexico behind it!" The lighting was very good and the costumes also, particularly that of Karen Brotherston as Ixlandia which was "most effective."

As the father, Gary Billings had "a nice, expressive voice but needed more authority."

The chorus could have been more energetic, but its vocal clarity, along with that of Rick King as Pepe, was very good.

Sapo, a frog, was played by Diana Billimore. Despite the fact that such a part is better discharged by a boy, Diana "did a good job, employed good movement" and she had a first class croak. Movement by Ixlandia was also good and the "dancers made the finale of the play."

Last, but by no means least, came The Missing Princess by Grades 4, 5 and 6 of Langford school. This was really creative drama.

While the cast was thoroughly familiar with the story of The Missing Princess, it was never scripted. The players provided their own lines. As a result there is no imminent threat to Shakespeare or Galsworthy or Noel Coward, but those young players were thoroughly involved in drama.

Lines like "Who writ it?" or "I didn't do nothing wrong" came out from time to time, but the important point was that the speakers were probing the intriguing mysteries of how to bring a story to life.

Additionally, they managed a very acceptable job of characterization and congratulations are due their directors, Mrs. Carol Pallan and Ed Reichen.

There are just two plays this evening at Belmont high school, both from junior high schools.

A. A. Milne's delightful The Ugly Duckling by Dunsmuir junior high parts the curtain at 8 p.m. and is followed by Josephina Niggli's The Red Velvet Goat, presented by Elizabeth Fisher junior high.

Students To Visit Science Centre

Ten student winners in the Sooke school district science fair held Friday have been chosen by fair judges to visit the Pacific Science Centre in Seattle Saturday.

The winners are Marion Grove, Martin Dolny, Carole Wilson, Alan Murray, Doug Birtwhistle, Milita Tonnesen, Andre Anthony, Christine Wilson, Bill Crowther, Glenn MacDonald.

Juniors Crowd Basketball Playoffs

Lansdowne, Oak Bay and Colquitz junior high schools have won their way into the trophy section of the Victoria police basketball team's first youth-aimed season, which all sides agree has been a resounding success.

The team was formed last fall by a group of policemen, with the support of Chief John Gregory, with the idea of improving relations with youth.

Seventeen games have been played against senior and junior high schools, and the three scoring the most points against the police got into the playoffs. Junior highs were given a 25-per-cent bonus for equality with the seniors, and the result was all juniors in the final.

The police will play at Colquitz April 1, at Oak Bay junior high April 2 and at Lansdowne April 5. The trophy will go to the team among those three scoring the highest total against the gendarmes.

So far, Lansdowne leads with 66 after beating the police 53-38. Oak Bay has 64 after a 51-45 victory and Colquitz ended at 60 following a 48-22 win. In all, the police team won 11 of its 17 games.

Spokesmen for the team said attendance was low at only one of the games and, at many, the school auditoriums were "so packed you couldn't move."

In all that time, no boos for the police were heard and often students cheered for the policemen and against their own clubs. That, said the spokesmen, has made the idea a success and initiated plans to do it again next year.

Police Seek Assailant Of Woman Hitchhiker

Oak Bay police asked Tuesday for help from anyone who saw a woman hitchhiker being picked up last Friday on Fort near Belcher, along with anyone who saw a small white car parked that evening in the Cattle Point area of Uplands Park.

In issuing the appeal, police disclosed a 19-year-old Victoria woman was sexually assaulted on a parking lot in that area by the man who had been driving the car, and added the man still was sought.

Police said the woman was on her way to see a friend when she stood on Fort near Belcher at about 7:30 p.m. Friday and began hitchhiking. They said a lone male was in the small white car which picked her up and drove to Cattle Point, parking the car in the most northerly section of the parking area near the boat ramps.

The woman whose name was not disclosed, told police another car drove into the parking area during the sexual assault. Soon after, she said, the assailant drove the car a short distance, let her out near the park and drove away.

Police asked that anyone with information phone them at 592-2424, especially with reports on the hitchhiking pickup or reports from the other car that drove into the parking area.

In addition, a spokesman warned all hitchhikers of the Friday incident, which he said "shows the practice can be dangerous."

CALGARY NURSES

Prune by Bible!

Yesterday we discussed the job of pruning the roses — the whys and wherefores thereof — and we covered in fair detail how to go about pruning newly planted bushes.

Today, as I promised, we'll have a look at the roses which have been established in your garden for a year or more. These are pruned according to their class — whether they are hybrid teas, floribundas, ramblers etc., and sometimes according to variety. Generally speaking, the weaker the growth, the more you cut away, or as one Parks Department gardener put it to me, you prune by the Bible: Matthew XXV, 29!

Use a very sharp knife or a really good pair of secateurs, making sure you get a good clean cut with no bruised or crushed wood or jagged edges. If your secateurs are somewhat less than perfect, finish off by smoothing the rough surface of the cut with a knife. Don't tug or pull at the bush while cutting, or you may loosen the roots in the soil. Better use two hands, one to steady the shoot below the cut.

Take your time over the pruning job and think things over as you work, visualizing the bush after it has made its new growth in response to your surgery. If the ground is at all wet and muddy, get yourself a plank to stand or kneel on as you study your bush. Wear a stout pair of gloves, as rose prickles can be murder!

Keep in mind the purposes of pruning; to remove all dead and diseased wood; to clear the centre of the bush of all crossing or ingrowing shoots so sun and air can enter freely; to limit the number of new shoots so the energy of the bush is channelled into the production of just a few superb, long-stemmed beauties rather than a multitude of poorish blooms; to preserve the symmetry and shapeliness of the bush.

With the hybrid teas, I start by cutting away all dead shoots and any which show the characteristic mottling of the bark that indicates disease or frost injury. Next, I take out, as low down as possible, any badly placed old stems which cross or rub against younger branches, or which may not leave enough room for the proper development of this year's new shoots.

With this done, I look over carefully the growth that remains. Always keep in mind that the thinner the shoot, the less likely it is to produce fat, plump growth buds and strong, new wood. Weak, spindly stuff, therefore, is cut away ruthlessly.

The old shoots that remain should now be shortened by one-half to two-thirds of their length. Look for a growth bud or a dormant eye fairly low down and pointing outward, and make your clean, slanting cut immediately above it.

After making each cut, take a look at the cross section of the freshly cut wood and check its color. If the pith in the centre is discolored yellow or brown, it indicates internal frost damage and it is unlikely that the selected eye or bud will develop properly. Choose another well-placed eye lower down, where the cut wood shows clean white or green pith.

The floribundas — these are the ones which bear their flowers in clusters — don't require anything like as severe pruning as the hybrid teas. Take out any weak or dead canes in their entirety, then shorten the remaining main stems by about one-third their length, again to an outward-facing eye. Watch the pith as before for frost-damaged wood.

With elderly floribundas, I think it is a good idea to take out one or two of the oldest, thickest, dark-colored canes every year, using a small saw, to encourage replacement shoots. In this way you can keep a bush perpetually young, with no part of it — except the roots — older than four years.

The climbers are a different story. How and when they are pruned is indicated by the kind of flowers they bare.

The small-flowered ramblers are treated like raspberries every cane which has bore flowers is cut right down to its base and the new canes trained and tied in to their place. Best time to do this is just after they have finished flowering.

The large-flowered kinds need less pruning. The laterals — these are the side shoots or sub-branches — should be shortened to within two leaf joints from the main branch. If the plant is bare at the base, as often happens with climbing roses, you can either bend down one or more of the lower shoots to cover the bare expanse of lower wall, or you can shorten one or two of the base shoots drastically, then train the resulting new growth to furnish the lower wall.

It is best to collect and burn all prunings, and to give each plant a good squirt of all-purpose rose spray as soon as the pruning job is completed.

Let's Get This Clear

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has been busy lately patiently explaining his policies in Southeast Asia. Over and over again.

A few people, however, still seem confused. For their benefit herewith is the transcript of a press conference with a hitherto-unimpeached source who kindly consented to explain the president's explanations.

Q — Sir, Hanoi has repeatedly said it will not release our prisoners of war until we withdraw our last troops from Vietnam. Yet the president said we will never withdraw our last troops from Vietnam until they release our prisoners of war. Can you explain this?

A — Certainly. This shows the president's first concern is for our prisoners of war and it will remain his first concern for years and years to come.

Q — We understood him to say that protecting American troops in Vietnam was his first concern.

A — Exactly. He made it perfectly clear that the sole reason we still have so many troops in Vietnam is to protect our troops in Vietnam. That is why we are supporting the South Vietnamese incursion of Laos.

Q — But not with ground troops?

A — He was very candid to say that the only troops we have on the ground in Laos are not ground troops. They are there simply to protect our helicopter crews who are there to protect the South Vietnamese troops who are there to protect our American troops in Vietnam who are there to protect themselves.

Q — Thank you for clarifying that. How does the invasion of Laos protect our troops?

A — By destroying North Vietnamese guns and tanks in Laos that will not take American lives.

Q — There are many more North Vietnamese guns and tanks in North Vietnam than in Laos. Will the president then support the talked-about South Vietnamese invasion of North Vietnam?

A — The president was very firm on this question. He very firmly didn't answer it. He also made it clear that he will not, at present, bomb the North Vietnamese unless they shoot down our planes that are not bombing them.

Q — The Nixon Doctrine, sir, says we will assist any Asian country that is invaded by another. Is the president then committed to assisting North Vietnam if it's invaded by South Vietnam?

A — As the president said, he will act only if "North Vietnamese activities are endangering or may endanger the American forces as we continue to withdraw."

Q — But if this small-scale South Vietnamese invasion of Laos has speeded up our withdrawal, wouldn't a large-scale invasion of North Vietnam mean we could bring all our troops home overnight?

A — If we weren't using our helicopters somewhere. Remember, we must support invasions of neighboring nations in order to protect our boys in Vietnam who must remain there so as not to abandon our prisoners of war whom Hanoi adamantly refuses to release until we go home. That, gentlemen, is our policy in a nutshell.

Q — One last question, sir. Senator Symington claimed that Dr. Kissinger, rather than Secretary of State Rogers, was responsible for our current Southeast Asia policy.

A — As the president's aid, that was "a cheap shot." Take it from me, gentlemen, Mr. Rogers is entirely responsible for this policy. Please get that straight once and for all, damn it! Is there anything else?

Q — Thank you, Dr. Kissinger.

Clothes and the Man

We were walking down the avenue, on our way to lunch, when this enormous black man passed us, wearing boots up to his knees, a flowing cape, a large bow-tie of rainbow colors, and a hat that would have done glory to Scaramouche.

Passers-by turned around to stare at him, and some of them to laugh. He was indeed a sight — one that I could take or leave alone. But I wondered why so many persons found his attire objectionable.

Just like hair these days, we seem irritated by clothes far beyond their importance. This means that both the hair and the clothes have some emotional importance to us, that goes deeper than the surface appearance.

The trouble, I suspect, lies in us, not in those who wear the long hair or the far-out apparel.

I have my own criterion in such matters, and I think it squares with the creed of "individualism" more than most people's.

In the first place, it make absolutely no difference to me how anyone chooses to look, externally — if somebody wanted to wear a flower-pot on his head, or a vest constructed out of parchment lamp-shades, I couldn't care less.

It is no use pretending that I don't make private judgments, however; we all do. My own private judgment is based on the difference between "self-expression" and "self-deception," and it is not always easy to tell the one from the other.

True individualism — if we believe in it — means that each person has a right to dress in a way that expresses himself, or conveys his self-image to the world. This is a good and laudable thing to do.

If what you wear is what you are (actually or potentially), then you are just seeking for authenticity in your sartorial life, and more power to you.

What is inauthentic, however, is dressing up in a costume merely to impress others or to create an image that is based on fantasy rather than on the basic truth of one's personality.

Most "hippie" costumes, in fact, are artificial and conformist more than "self-expression," because the wearers have simply put on a uniform they are not entitled to wear.

To be "conventional" in clothes is to do what others are doing — whether the others are being prim or flamboyant, wearing a suit or a leather jerkin and beads.

There is little more individuality among the hippie types than among the straights, for the true individuality among the hippie types than among the straights, for the true individualist is a rare animal in any group. And one to be respected, not laughed at.

He leaves to mourn his passing his loving wife, Mary (Molly) Irene, at home; son, Terry P., Victoria; brother, William, Victoria; granddaughter, Marlene, Victoria; two nieces and one nephew. He was predeceased by a grandson, Brent.
Funeral service will be held on Wednesday, March 17, at 1:30 p.m., from CHAPLIN'S FUNERAL CHAPEL with Rev. Angus Cameron of Lundavra officiating. Interment in Hatley Memorial Gardens. Flowers gratefully declined, donations to B.C. Cancer Association.

WICK — Suddenly, on March 13, 1971, Mrs. Marjorie Irene Wick, aged 41 years, beloved wife of Walter Wick of 2545 Selwyn Rd.; born in Regina, Sask., and a resident here for the past 12 years. She also leaves two daughters, Gloria and Patricia, at home; brothers and sisters.
Funeral service at McCall Bros. FLORAL CHAPEL, Johnson and Vancouver Streets, on Thursday, March 18, at 3:15 p.m., with the Rev. A. E. King officiating. Interment at Hatley Memorial Gardens.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to relatives, friends and neighbours for their expressions of sympathy, floral tributes and contributions to the Heart Fund; also a special thanks to Dr. R. J. Campbell, Dr. R. J. Forth and the nurses of the Intensive Care Unit, Royal Jubilee Hospital; to Chapin's Funeral Chapel, and to all who rendered assistance during the illness and passing of my dear wife.
—Wm. S. Harding.

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to friends and neighbors who sent expressions of sympathy, floral tributes and helped me in my time of sorrow. Also special thanks to Drs. G. Friesen, Ross Sinclaire and J. L. Hefferman and staff of St. Joseph's Hospital. Special thanks to Mrs. Croasdale and Mr. and Mrs. King.—Mrs. E. Lewis.

GLADNESS AND MADNESS: I'm happy to report that NBC may turn the recent George Kennedy made-for-TV movie Sarge, about a policeman who turns priest, into a weekly series. Sarge is the best TV movie I have even seen, by miles . . . Rod Serling's Night Gallery also has a chance to become an NBC series next season.

The CBC plans a Civilisation-like series on the history of Canada . . . CTV having increased its Canadian content by making the Barbara McNair series in Toronto, will do the same next season with a series starring the First Edition singing group.

NBC has managed to save its monthly newsmagazine First Tuesday for next season. But the show will move to Fridays, traditionally the lowest-rated night of any week. Will they name it First Anyday?

□

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's answer — Only a few more days of famous three-named people, like movie producers Cecil B. DeMille and David O. Selznick and sports stars Grover Cleveland Alexander and John L. Sullivan. As for me, I can't lick any man in the house.

Today's question is, unfortunately, more of the silly same. In music, John Phillip and George M.; in movies, W. C. and maybe a tough one, C. Aubrey. If that's not the good old days, nothing is. Answers Thursday.

"My! Aren't we grumpy this morning!"

Wednesday Highlights

C-5:00 p.m.—NHL hockey, Chicago at Vancouver, taped from Tuesday night and finished by 7 p.m.—6, 8.

C-7:30—KIRO marked St. Patrick's Day with the Abbey Players, Siobhan McKenna and "foreigner" Bing Crosby—7.

C-9:00—Kraft's final show is a comic knock at suburbia with Steve Lawrence, Eydie Gorme, Sid Caesar, Barbara Feldon—5.

C-10:00—Man at the Centre dramatizes the 1837 Upper Canada revolt, with William Lyon Mackenzie the hero—2, 6.

● C-10:00—Everything is reruns these days, which is bad, except for Four in One, which starts the sensational Dennis Weaver series McCloud all over again. Tonight: scrumptious Diana Muldaur—5.

CABLE 10 — 7:00 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30, Project Travel; 8:00, sports films; 8:30, Outdoorsmen, motor-sports; 9:00, Prime Resource; 9:30, Our World — Let's Face It.

Wednesday Movies

● C-9:00 a.m. — Violent Saturday (neatly-done 1955 robbery drama), Victor Mature, Ernest Borgnine, Lee Marvin, Sylvia Sidney, many more — 4.

C-12:35 noon — Esther and the King (1960, another Biblical turkey), Joan Collins. Turn down the sound and just watch Esther — 6, 8.

4:00 p.m. — My Wife's Best Friend (1952, another dreary romanticomedy), Anne Baxter, Macdonald Carey — 7.

4:00 — Bombs Over Burma (1942 Anna May Wrongo) — 13.

C-5:30 — Coast of Skeletons (sub-par 1965 adventure), Richard Todd, Dale Robertson — 12.

8:30 — Life at the Top (1965 sequel, as bad as Room at the Top was good), Laurence Harvey, Jean Simmons, Honor Blackman — 8.

C-9:00 — Women Obsessed (1959 weeper, fairly well done), Susan Hawyard, Stephen Boyd, Theodore Bikel — 7.

11:30 — Charlie Chan in Shanghai (1935 Warner Oland). Famed Orient detective hired white bodyguard as Occident insurance — 7.

C-12:00 — Companions in Nightmare (fair 1968 therapy-murder, made for TV), Melvyn Douglas, Dana Andrews, Gig Young, Anne Baxter, many more — 6, 8.

1:00 a.m. — Girls, Town (1942 disaster), Edith Fellows, Peggy Ryan. Both were taller than Boys' Towns Mickey Rooney, and uglier — 13.

1:05 — Dark Corner (hambone 1946 whodunit), Clifton Webb, Lucille Ball. Brucie's Laws tomorrow, like: When Mercedes McCambridge ties her shoes in her car, Mercedes Benz — 12.

Wednesday Radio

WORLD CURLING reports are due at 10:55 a.m. and 4:45 p.m. — CBU (690).

7:00 p.m. — Another CBC documentary marking the B.C. centenary, this one from the memoirs of Dr. John Sebastian Helmcken — CBU.

8:05 — Gala has two warhorses: the Tchaikovsky violin concerto and Schumann piano concerto — CFMS (98.5).

9:30 — A recital by Victoria pianist Robin Wood: a Mozart fantastia and sonata — CBU-FM (105.7).

● — Recommended; C — Color.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

This deal presents an intriguing situation where South is apparently faced with an unavoidable heart loser and an unavoidable club loser. However, if he buckles down to his task with a will, he can expunge one of them and make the contract.

A spade is led and the king is covered by the ace. Declarer ruffs it and notes that simply driving out the ace of hearts would not provide enough tricks, and accordingly he decides that some special feat of arms is needed.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

3 NT	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♢	Pass	6 ♢	All Pass

Opening lead: Three of spades

For the moment he battled on by drawing three rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. Then he leads the three of hearts.

East now discovers the unpleasant truth that he has been placed in an impossible position. If he goes up with the ace, declarer has three ready-made heart tricks, and can discard three losing clubs on the Q-J of hearts and queen of spades.

Moreover, if East doesn't go up with the ace of hearts when the three is led, declarer wins with the king, crosses to the king of clubs, discards the deuce of hearts on the queen of spades, and generously gives up a club trick to make the slam.

On the surface it appears there is absolutely nothing East can do about this, but nevertheless he can defeat the contract and there are no two ways about it. Tomorrow we describe how.

Trial Witness

Pair Found In Room

NANAIMO—A United States immigration officer told Nanaimo Supreme Court Tuesday of finding Dr. Glen Gold Stewart and his companion, Maria Trigiani, in a gas-filled room in a San Francisco apartment Nov. 24, 1970.

Stewart is being tried for non-capital murder in connection with the death of Cornelius (Gordon) Adrian Kralt, on or about Oct. 31, at a bible camp on Pachena Bay near Bamfield.

Kralt's mutilated and partially decomposed body was found Nov. 22, in a field near Ross Camp.

Michael G. Harpold, immigration investigator with the U.S. justice department, said that when he first knocked on the door of Apt. 308, 2415 Van Ness Ave., Stewart opened it a crack, then slammed it shut when Harpold identified himself.

Door Open

Harpold said he knocked again, Stewart again opened the door a crack and handed him a California driver's licence in Stewart's name.

Harpold told the court he kept his foot in the door and could hear Stewart attempt to barricade it.

"I asked him to let me in and just talk this thing over," Harpold said.

He then went to get the manager of the building, and when he returned, there was the smell of kitchen gas from the room.

Harpold said he went via a fire escape to an unlocked window, entered the apartment and found Stewart and Miss Trigiani sitting at the kitchen table.

"The kitchen was filled with gas," Harpold said.

He said all the handles had been removed from the stove and all four burners and the oven were emitting gas.

He told the court he threw open the window and turned off the gas.

He said Stewart told him, "You can't do this. You've got to have a warrant to do this," and indicated he would like to see a lawyer.

Passed Out

Harpold said he replied, "I didn't think I needed a warrant to save your life."

He said Miss Trigiani had passed out and was on the floor, and he tried to get Stewart to help her.

He said, "I asked him why it should be my place to have to urge a doctor to help someone who obviously needs help."

He said Stewart told him Miss Trigiani was all right, and that she had just fainted.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer R. F. MacIsaac, Haropold said that Stewart examined Miss Trigiani to find her pulse and heartbeat.

Harpold said he told Stewart, "I know you're in very deep trouble in Canada," and that Stewart replied, "Yes, I'm the man you're looking for."

He said Stewart then lost consciousness and a few minutes later both he and Miss Trigiani were taken to hospital by ambulance.

Two empty pill vials were found in a wastebasket in the kitchen, he said, and a fishing knife on the dresser.

Harpold said Stewart was registered in the apartment as Robert Campbell, and in a wastebasket a torn-up letter was found addressed to that name.

Gun Drawn

He said the pill bottles had labels that showed they were prescribed by Stewart and filled out in the San Francisco area.

Under cross-examination, Harpold said he had reason to believe Stewart was armed and that he entered the apartment with his service revolver drawn, loaded and pointing at the ceiling in a warning position.

He said when he was sure Stewart had no gun, he put his revolver away.

He was asked if he could "honestly expect" Stewart to react as a doctor and treat Miss Trigiani while he was "en route to suicide."

He said yes, and also replied affirmatively when asked if there were "certain reasons" for Stewart being in such a state of despair that he would commit suicide.

He said he learned after this event that Stewart had declared bankruptcy and was having difficulties over visiting rights to his children.

He said Stewart had no medical equipment with him.

Jack McLeman of Port Alberni, Kralt's brother-in-law, was returned to the witnessbox Tuesday afternoon for a continuation of cross-examination by MacIsaac.

McLeman said Kralt had never told him he was being pursued by a homosexual, only that he was afraid of Burrows.

Camp Job

Previous testimony established that Stewart used the name Dave Burrows when he applied for a job as caretaker of Ross Camp, Pachena Bay.

Witness said that on Sept. 30, Kralt went to his home to report on a conversation he had with Burrows.

McLeman said Kralt told him that Burrows had bossed him around and told him he had permission from an official of the Shantyman's Association to act as camp caretaker.

He said he asked Kralt if he was scared of Burrows and that Kralt had replied, "well, sort of."

McLeman repeated testimony that he checked with the Victoria office of the association and found Burrows had not been given permission. Witness then went to the government wharf at Bamfield to talk with Burrows and warn him to stay away from the camp.

Sister Worried

MacIsaac asked him: "What, if anything, was going on at Camp Ross that you were so anxious to keep Stewart off the property?"

McLeman replied: "Nothing."

MacIsaac asked if he wanted to keep Stewart away, "so you and he (Kralt) and (Bill) Irvine would have a little hide-out to go and have a little fun in every once in awhile."

McLeman said, "no," saying that he and his wife, Kralt's sister, were worried about Kralt being isolated at the camp in case anything should happen to him.

He explained that Kralt liked to surf and in the course of his work operated a power saw — two activities that could lead to injuries. He said he had originally urged Kralt not to take the job.

McLeman was asked how he could be so certain when he gave testimony describing what clothes of Kralt were missing.

He replied that during the summer, when the camp was in operation, he and Kralt sometimes exchanged clothes and together bought clothes to replace those damaged at work.

C. T. D. Whitehouse of Saanichton told the court of spending two hours on Stewart's ketch at Port Alberni Oct. 31.

He identified Stewart and said the latter was using the name Dave Burrows then.

Whitehouse said he went there because his 18-year-old daughter Susan Carol wanted to sign on as crew on the boat and he wanted to satisfy himself that she would be safe.

'Black Eye'

He said Stewart had a black eye, facial lacerations and minor abrasions on his hands.

Whitehouse said Stewart told him he had fallen from the mizzen mast and that they were headed for San Francisco and possibly on to Mexico and Panama.

The trial continues today.

Man Dies As Car Hits Bluff

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man was killed and his wife injured early Tuesday morning when their car went out of control on an icy section of the Alberni-Parksville highway, near Cameron Lake, and hit a rock bluff.

Dead is Wilfred Mueller, 1515 Waterhouse, a welder at Alberni plywood division. His wife, Margaret, was reported in fair condition at West Coast hospital.

Historic Tower Bites the Dust

That once-proud tower on Gorge Road Hospital site was last week called historically important and something of old Victoria that should be preserved. Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said tower should be saved if possible, but asked for "an expression of broad public opinion on the matter." No response was forthcoming and tower bit the dust Tuesday.

Striking landmark was once prominent ornament on home built in mid-1880s for Mrs. Northing Snowden, fifth daughter of Robert Dunsmuir. About 20 years ago home became first wing of Gorge Road Hospital which is now undergoing giant expansion. Photographer William A. Boucher caught last moments of tower early Tuesday as wreckers take first chunk away at left, and tower comes tumbling down, finally to be cleared away into pile of rubble by bulldozer.

Jail Threat for Tax Cheats

Honest Men 'Look to Courts'

The courts will have to consider jail sentences if cases of income-tax cheating "continue to come to light in this area," Judge William Ostler said Tuesday.

He made the statement in Victoria Provincial Court before levying fines totalling $28,899.68 against Victoria businessman Siegfried Marquardt, 1780 Fairfield, who pleaded guilty last Thursday to two Income Tax Act charges.

Ostler said: "There is widespread and understandable and legitimate public indignation when persons are exposed cheating on their income tax, particularly on a scale such as this."

Prominent among the indignant, he said, was "that large body of citizens who struggle to maintain a decent living standard for themselves and their families while preserving their integrity and self-respect by meeting their responsibilities to their government and its citizens."

The judge said those people "look to the courts to see to it that such malefactors are punished and do not profit from their delinquencies" and "it is proper that the courts act as their conscience."

Then he reached the nub of his statement:

"If matters such as this continue to come to light in this area, it will undoubtedly be necessary for the courts to seriously consider taking that action which is appropriate whenever any particular type of crime flourishes and multiplies in a community —the imposition of jail sentences, as a deterrent and as a public example."

Ostler added: "People who deliberately defraud the public treasury and throw the burden of government upon the shoulders of honest men should not feel that they are some sort of superior breed to the common thief or cheat.

"The arena and some of the plays may be different, but the name of the game is still dishonesty."

Marquardt had pleaded guilty to one charge of wilfully evading payment of taxes on income in excess of $60,000 between Jan. 1, 1966, and April 30, 1969, and court had been told the income was estimated at $65,942.02 and the federal tax at $18,899.68.

He had also pleaded guilty to one charge of making false or deceptive entries in V.I. Shipyards Ltd. books of account in the period up to Dec. 31, 1968. Prosecutor Robert Hutchison had said the normal penalty is a fine roughly equal to the amount of tax evaded.

Ostler fined Marquardt $5,000 plus $18,899.68, the amount evaded, on the evasion charge and set a one-year jail term if the fine is not paid. Sentence on the other charge was a $5,000 fine or an extra three months.

The judge said both sentences were in addition to any prison term imposed by a court and gave Marquardt six months to pay the fines. Marquardt presently is appealing a fraud conviction and a resulting two-year prison term.

Marquardt must also pay the tax evaded — $18,899.68.

Veteran Writer Dies

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Christ Church Cathedral for Kenneth Drury, 78, who began his career in journalism as a summertime reporter for The Daily Colonist in 1910.

Drury died Sunday night at his residence, 524 Island Road, after a brief illness.

Born Feb. 16, 1893, in Victoria, the son of the former MLA R. L. Drury and Mrs. Drury, he was educated at Boys' Central school, Victoria high school and the University of Toronto. He studied journalism at Columbia.

As a youth interested in politics, he covered the visit to Prince Rupert of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1910 for the Colonist. He later studied piano at Toronto Conservatory of Music.

Returning to Victoria, he worked for the Victoria Times until he went overseas with the Canadian Army in 1917. After the war he came back to the Times.

He served the Times in various senior capacities, including that of editor, until in 1944 when he left to become editor of the Vancouver News Herald, and later assistant to the publisher of the Sun. He retired from the profession in 1956 and returned to Victoria.

His gifts of books to the University of Victoria library, endowment of a special section of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and his work with the Columbia Historical Society and the Craigdarroch Castle Society were appreciated by those familiar with his work. He was active in the Men's Canadian Club and the University Extension Association.

He is survived by his wife Katherine. Funeral arrangements are being handled by Hayward's Funeral Chapel.

Thomson

CP Captain Overboard

Captain George A. Thomson, 79, of Apartment 3, 2768 Satellite Street, Oak Bay, was presumably overcome by a form of seizure and lost overboard Thursday enroute to Hawaii according to the captain of the SS Canberra, on which Thomson was a passenger.

Thomson was born in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1892 and came to Victoria in 1927 where he joined the CPR as a junior officer, working his way up in various positions until he became a master.

He brought out the CPR ships Princess Marguerite, Princess Patricia, Princess of Nanaimo and Princess of Vancouver from Great Britain.

He was a lieutenant in the Royal Navy during the First World War and was lieutenant-commander when he joined the Canadian navy in the Second World War.

He retired from the CPR in 1957 and devoted his spare time to writing, sailing and memberships in the Thermopylae and United Services Clubs in Victoria. In the past few years he also spent considerable time holidaying abroad.

Thomson is survived by his wife, Isabel; daughter, Jennifer, of Victoria; sister, Mrs. Betty Harris in England and niece Mrs. Peggy Paddon of Ladner, B.C. A memorial service will be held next week.

Hospital Stay Cuts Gain Public Favor

Policies of St. Joseph's Hospital aimed at accelerating admission and discharge of patients have been well received by the public, says the hospital's executive director.

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, in an article in the current edition of Canadian Hospital, a magazine published for the hospital industry, described St. Joseph's system of monitoring patient stay and concluded:

"Since all doctors are aware of the proposed length of stay (at the time the patient is admitted), patients can be told of the number of days they may expect to be in hospital.

"With this knowledge, they know what is expected of them. The general public is well aware of the shortage of beds, and they understand the implications. We have received very few criticisms, and those received were more of a social nature than medical."

Last spring, St. Joseph's launched a system of monitoring lengths of stay based on a computer study of 16,418,000 dicharges from 995 hospitals in Canada and the United States.

The data related to 50 common medical and surgical treatments. St. Joseph's compared its average length of stays with those from other hospitals and came up with recommendations for the doctors who practice there.

The status of each patient — that is to say, whether or not he should over-stay the data predicted for his discharge — is reviewed six times a week.

"It entails a review of the charts of patients who over-stay while they are still in hospital, rather than after discharge," Van Tilburg wrote. "A review following discharge has some serious limitations because it tends only to reveal extreme or bizarre cases of inappropriate (bed) use."

As a result of the close observation, St. Joseph's admitted about 600 more patients last year than it did in 1969.

"Over the years, the average length of stay has been reduced due to advances in medicine and economic pressures. Those convinced of the healing powers of prolonged bed rest discovered the equally effective healing power of early ambulation.

"For example, it was common practice to keep a maternity patient in the hospital for 10 days. The present length of stay for this type of patient is between four and six days."

Van Tilburg also noted that the hospital's waiting list has been reduced substantially since it started this system, "but the rapid turnover of patients is, nevertheless costly to the hospital."

He indicates that the hospital bed situation will worsen before it improves. In 1968, said Van Tilburg, Greater Victoria had a shortage of 177 hospital beds, and in 1976 there will be a shortage of 363 beds.

"The three acute care hospitals in the area have a total complement of 1,006 beds. This has not changed since 1963, and no new beds are under construction or even at the planning stage. It will be several years at least before additional beds are available."

Colwood Boy Wins $500 Song Prize

A 14-year-old Colwood boy was presented Tuesday morning with $500 for winning a song contest held for May's Victorian Days.

The presentation was made to Stephen Hatfield, who lives at Royal Roads, at a breakfast meeting of the Victorian Days committee after he presented his song with the aid of the Royal Roads choir.

Stephen's father is the Protestant padre at Royal Roads and his mother the choir director.

He plays piano, organ, and drums, and is taking Grades 9 and 10 of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. He has been composing for three years, but this is the first song he has had accepted outside his own surroundings.

Stephen and the choir were both presented with honorary founding memberships in the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts.

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi and Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch will be the speakers at a meeting of the Esquimalt Social Credit Association at 8 p.m. Thursday at View Royal Hall, 279 Island Highway.

□

Leonard McLennan of Vancouver, director of claims, advisory service of the Workmen's Compensation Board, will be available for consultation on claims matters between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. today at the WCB Victoria office, 3490 Saanich Road or by phone at 386-6378.

□

John Corry, Hallin Ford, and Dickson Falconer will be panelists for a discussion of Canada's white paper on foreign policy to be held at a meeting of the Victoria United Nations Association at 8 p.m. Thursday in Room 112 of the Provincial Museum.

Recreation Established

The establishment of a 22,700-acre recreation area in the Peace River district in northeastern British Columbia was announced Monday by recreation minister Ken Kiernan. The area, the sixth to be established under the Parks Act, centres on Gwillim Lake, 35 miles south of Chetwynd. The lake is 10 miles long and is stocked with northern pike, trout and grayling.

Kiernan said the area, in rolling, tree-covered foothills, can be reached by a limited access logging road.

Park Plan Includes Children's Farm

New life will come to the grounds roamed by Queenie, the Beacon Hill Park horse, until her death last year.

Goats, pigs, lambs, maybe even a cow and a small horse are to become the feature attractions of a proposed children's farm in the park.

Victoria's parks committee recommended to council Tuesday that chain link fence additions be installed this year at a cost of $2,500. Next year, the parks department plans to get the animals for the farm, which will be located west of the main entrance, and is to include Queenie's former enclosure.

Parks committee chairman Ald. Clyde Savage said he hopes to get help from a number of service clubs to make the children's farm a real success.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said it might be a good idea to get a cow, too. "Most kids haven't got a clue where milk comes from."

The park's small zoo currently contains peacocks, rabbits, deer and poultry.

Provincial COURT

A criminal record showing sentences totalling 83 years for 25 offences since 1949 was read Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court for a 38-year-old man facing sentence after a shooting incident last Saturday at Simpsons-Sears.

The record for Henry Patrick McBryan, no fixed address, was read by prosecutor John Macintyre and showed four armed robberies, two escapes, one major narcotics charge and numerous other offences.

McBryan pleaded guilty Monday to three charges containing six counts — dangerous use of a revolver, possession of a restricted weapon, possession of heroin possesion of stolen car and two counts of false pretences involving use of stolen credit cards.

Tuesday, he pleaded guilty to two similar false-pretences counts which said he obtained a total of $692 worth of items last Dec. 5 from the T. Eaton Co. and Simpsons-Sears.

McBryan, whose 22-year record showed sentences totalling 74 years since 1958, said he was released from prison on parole March 21, 1969, and his parole expires in April of 1974.

Macintyre said other charges are possible and the case was remanded to today by Judge William Ostler for sentence.

□

Stuart John Linnell, 23, address unknown, was remanded to March 24, for sentence after he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of MDA last Dec. 31 in Victoria. Court was told Linnell had 500 capsules of the restricted drug when a home was searched at 1803 Fernwood and Linnell had been released Dec. 24 after serving a term for assaulting a peace officer.

□

Two months in jail was the sentence for George Coulter, 69, of 536 Johnson, who pleaded guilty to a charge of theft involving less than $50 — the shoplifting of a file and a padlock Tuesday from the Bay. Prosecutor Macintyre said Coulter had "the doubtful distinction of having a record that runs for eight pages, including numerous convictions for theft."

□

A sentence of a nominal one-day jail term, a $250 fine and 18 months' probation was ordered for Wayne Arthur Sealey, 18, of 3395 Cadboro Bay. He pleaded guilty March 8 to a charge of breaking into a service station at 1321 Yates on the night of March 5-6 and theft of $15.90 cash plus tools worth an estimated $400.

□

Mrs. Jean Pearce, 24, of 784 Gorge West, was given a suspended sentence and six-month probationary term after she pleaded guilty March 8 to a charge of theft involving more than $50 — the shoplifting March 5 of 25 clothing items worth a total of $59.65 from The Bay.

□

Linda Duffy, 18, of 110 Menzies, was fined $175 following her plea of guilty to a charge of dangerous driving Monday evening in Victoria.

□

A fine of $75 was set for William Johnson, 25, of 2277 McNeil, who was found guilty following a trial on a charge of common assault Jan. 9 in Victoria. The charge was laid after Johnson, arrested on another matter, hit a stranger who was the only other occupant of the police paddy-wagon after the stranger refused to give him a cigarette.

□

In traffic court, four drivers pleaded guilty before Judge E. F. N. Robinson to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria.

Fines of $350 and three-month driving bans were ordered for John Johnson, 64 Hampton, and David Laws, 22, of 728 Hillside, both stopped Feb. 28, and William Skibo, 57, of 2759 Belmont, stopped Feb. 27. Douglas Stewart, 45, of 527 Esquimalt, stopped Feb. 25, was fined $300 and given a three-month driving ban.

George Herbert Howard, 38, of 3439 Cook, was fined $300 and given a partial four-month driving ban after he pleaded guilty to a charge of being impaired Feb. 23 in Victoria while in care or control of a vehicle.

Recycle Groups Expand

Three more neighborhood waste recycling groups are expected to be in operation shortly, a member of the Gonzales Bay recycling group said Tuesday.

Ted Knowles said that several other persons have also indicated interest in establishing collection depots for neighborhood wastes that can be recycled (reprocessed).

"We prefer people to set up their own ideas and systems the best way for them, but we're willing to help," Knowles said.

About 30 persons attended a meeting Monday called for those interested in recycling.

Knowles said members of the Gonzales Bay neighborhood volunteers have been invited to speak on recycling at two Greater Victoria high schools.

Gain Claimed By Gaullists

PARIS (UPI) — French Gaullists claimed Monday they have turned the tables on the communist-dominated opposition and achieved significant gains in Sunday's national city council voting.

Interior Minister Raymond Marcellin predicted at a news conference that when the second round of voting is over next week, the Gaullist coalition will control half the mayors in the country's 38,000 towns and villages.

Carpenter Local Pays Dividend On Retirement

To the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, it's a "genuine B.C. product."

To the eight retired members of the union's Victoria local, who received their first cheques this week, it's really the first pension scheme of its kind.

After last summer's labor turmoil and the province-wide lockout of construction unions, the carpenters negotiated the pension plan with the Construction Labor Relations Association.

It is paid completely by employer contributions and gives a minimum of $50 a month to anyone retiring after 10 years of continuous union membership, John Anatooshkin of Vancouver said.

Anatooshkin, administrator of the fund for the union, was in Victoria to present the cheques. Eight of the 12 men on his list turned up at the special meeting called for the purpose. Another six are also eligible, but haven't yet made the necessary application.

The administrator said there are other unions with similar pension funds, but that this one has one unique point.

It became effective last Oct. 1 and payments date back to the same day. Contributions have to be made to other funds for a year or so before payments begin.

This meant the cheques issued here this week were retroactive to Oct. 1 (six months) and went to men who have been retired for varying lengths of time.

Ole Jacobson, 72, of 1783 Adanac, had the longest service of those receiving the cheques locally. He has been a member of the union since 1926 and the Victoria local since 1940. He moved here from Calgary.

Ole said he has been retired about a year.

"It's a genuine B.C. product," said Anatooshkin.

"All the monies in the fund are invested within the province," he said. "You might say we are helping to build B.C."

Jim Sawyer, business agent of the Victoria local, sees the fund as providing a different kind of dividend for the young carpenter.

"There's been no compulsory retirement age, but now that the men can get this at 65 more of them will be in a position to retire and this will open up more jobs to the younger men," he said.

"These older men are all first-class carpenters and are always in demand."

Crystal Likely Name Choice

Victoria's new swimming pool, now under construction at Central Park, will probably be named the Crystal.

"Everybody knew the old Crystal and we should really retain that name," Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton told the Colonist Tuesday.

An earlier suggestion to hold a contest to find a suitable name for the pool was abandoned Monday by council's recreation committee.

The committee also tabled a letter from the Victoria Police Commission recommending that sports organizations holding events at the Memorial Arena use policing services available at overtime rates.

The issue arose over a brawl Feb. 6 during and after a hockey game in the arena. Police Chief John Gregory told the commission's last regular meeting that off-duty policemen may be hired by organizations to be present during arena events.

Air Canada

Stewardess Not Native

OTTAWA (CP) — As a frequent cross-country traveller, Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) says he has seen Air Canada stewardesses of British, German, Chinese, West Indian, French and English backgrounds. But he has never seen an Eskimo or Indian stewardess on the crown-owned airline.

He rose in the Commons during an adjournment debate Tuesday night and asked that the situation be corrected.

Surely Air Canada wouldn't tolerate discrimination, he said. But perhaps it was time to start discriminating in favor of native people.

He suggested the airline recruit Indian and Eskimo stewardesses "even if they have to lower educational qualifications."

Gerad Duquet (L—Quebec East), parliamentary secretary to Transport Minister Don Jamieson, said everything possible is being done to ensure that no person or groups of persons is being discriminated against. Air Canada recruits personnel on the merit system.

Island Pair Dies In Plane Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Port Hardy man and his wife were killed when their light plane crashed Tuesday morning shortly after taking off from the municipal airport here.

RCMP said Arnold Edward Bernier, 42, and his wife, Clara Ellen, apparently were on their way home to Port Hardy when the crash occurred.

Airport manager Peter Frumento said he saw the aircraft — a single-engine Beechcraft Muskateer — take off at about 8:15 a.m. Frumento said he did not see the plane crash but spotted a cloud of smoke a short time later. The plane was found about a mile south of the end of the runway.

A Canadian Forces helicopter was first to reach the wreckage.

RCMP reported that the aircraft may have had trouble gaining proper altitude, and believed this may have been caused by icing. The temperature at the time of the crash was about 32 degrees.

Transport department investigator Roy Jobling has begun an inquiry into the crash. RCMP said the Berniers had apparently spent Monday night in Campbell River and were anxious to leave early for Port Hardy.

Port Hardy Mayor Nick Cadwallader said Bernier, an employee of MacMillan Bloedel, had lived there about one year. Cadwallader said Bernier was an experienced pilot, who flew often.

The Berniers are survived by a teenage daughter and a younger son.

Nixons Make It Official: Tricia To Wed June 5

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon formally announced Tuesday night the engagement of their daughter Tricia to Edward Finch Cox, a Harvard University law student and son of a prominent New York family.

The Nixons said the wedding would be held at the White House June 5. Miss Nixon, 25, will be the eighth daughter of a president to take her marriage vows in the executive mansion. The most recent was Lynda Bird Johnson who wed marine Capt. Charles S. Robb Dec. 9, 1967.

Cox, 24, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cox of New York City and Westhampton, Long Island.

The long-expected announcement came during a party officially organized to celebrate both the 59th birthday of Mrs. Nixon and St. Patrick's Day.

The announcement was made to the accompaniment of a champagne toast with members of both families, close friends and Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch looking on.

After Kidnap Try

Ceylon Under Guard

COLOMBO (Reuter) — A state of emergency was declared throughout Ceylon Tuesday and troops mounted guard at key points on the island off the south coast of India.

Governor-General William Gopallawa declared the emergency on the advice of Prime Minister Mrs. Srimavo Bandaranaike, said a special news bulletin on the state-owned Ceylon Broadcasting Corp.

Rising Tension

The move follows reports of several incidents in Ceylon in the last few weeks, including an alleged attempt to kidnap Social Services Minister Tikiri Banda Tennekoon; the arrest of 26-year-old Rohan Wijeweera, leader of the Peoples Liberation Front, and an attack on the United States embassy.

On March 7, Mrs. Bandaranaike called out the army, navy and air force in the country's 22 administrative districts to maintain law and order.

Reasons Today

The radio said Mrs. Bandaranaika would broadcast today the reasons why the government had to declare the emergency.

Parliament is currently dealing with legislation to declare the country "a free, independent republic" within the Commonwealth.

It is at present a dominion within the Commonwealth.

Dewey Dies In Miami

Youth Aid Plan 'Absurd... Late'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Absurd Puffery," stormed Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

"Ridiculous ... to a large extent meaningless," lamented David Orlikow of Winnipeg North, speaking for the New Democrats.

"Band-aid treatment," cried Creditiste leader Real Caouette in indignation.

And so it was with scorn, edging to the brink of disbelief that this was all, that the opposition, united in anger, dismissed as entirely inadequate Prime Minister Trudeau's $57,800,000 summer employment, travel and hostel plan for students.

Bringing his attack to its peak, Stanfield quoted the challenge to youth, as the prime minister had called it:

"There is work to be done," the prime minister Tuesday told the Commons in outlining the government's summer youth job program, "there are tasks to be performed.

"There are experiences to be gained.

"There is a whole country to be explored.

"There is a generation

South's Troops Retreat in Laos

SAIGON (UPI) — Front reports said Tuesday U.S. artillery reinforcements were being rushed to the Laotian border to protect South Vietnamese troops retreating from positions deep inside Laos in the face of heavy Communist attack.

Field dispatches and military sources told of increasing casualties as nearly 2,000 South Vietnamese soldiers, some hacking their way through jungles and others aboard U.S. helicopters, tried to get out of the area around fire base Lolo, an outpost 12 miles from the frontier which was abandoned early Tuesday.

About 12,000 North Vietnamese were said to be advancing.

For the second straight day North Vietnamese gunners shelled the U.S. base at Khe Sanh Tuesday night and wounded several American soldiers. Spokesmen said about 70 rounds of rockets, mortars and artillery smashed into the base.

Prosecutor: If Calley Unconvicted

'No Better Than Enemies'

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — An impassioned army prosecutor Tuesday night called on a six-officer court-martial board — "the conscience of the country" — to find Lieutenant William Calley Jr. guilty of murder at My Lai or "make us no better than our enemies."

Capt. Aubrey Daniel III, his voice rising and the muscles of his neck standing out like ropes, closed the case against Calley by turning his back to the jury, pointing at the stocky, 27-year-old defendant and crying:

"The duty is yours to find the accused guilty as charged of all offences."

Caley's ears turned red.

The case was to go to the jury late Tuesday night — the third anniversary of the killings at My Lai — after the military judge, Col. Reid Kennedy, delivered his instructions to the court-martial board.

If Calley is gound guilty of charges that he murdered, by his own hand and by the men at his orders, 102 unresisting villagers at My Lai, he must be put to death or sentenced to life in prison.

In the defence's final arguments, attorney George Latimer asked the board to distinguish between errors in judgment and criminal acts and "let this boy go free."

Postal Loss Staggering

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor trouble has cost the post office an estimated $31 million in lost revenue in the fiscal year ending this month, Jean Pierre Cote, minister in charge of the department, said Tuesday.

Gamble for Canada: Buy U.S. Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government had the courage to gamble, Canadians could start immediately to buy out the American economy, Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) told the Commons Tuesday.

Saltsman, who appeared delighted as several MPs set aside newspapers and writing pads to listen, said the government has only to look at "how smoothly they (the Americans) bought us out" and learn from past mistakes.

The Commons was debating a Creditiste motion "that this House regrets that the government has not seen fit to apply Social Credit monetary policy." But discussion on the motion, which under House rules does not come to a vote, quickly strayed to other matters.

Saltsman said Canada has about $4 billion in its foreign exchange fund, most of it held in U.S. treasury bills.

Saltsman

This money should be used to buy out companies in the U.S. which are in the process of buying into Canadian companies, said Saltsman.

Canadian businesses could also borrow money on the American market to invest in buying control in American firms. For example, if $500 million had been invested by Canadians in General Motors Co. in the mid-1950s, the same individuals would now own one-third of the firm if they had re-invested dividends.

Saltsman, who said his theory was based largely on a 1957 newspaper article, told the Commons many people in government believe the foreign exchange fund must be kept in liquid and near-liquid forms.

But banks would always be willing to lend the government money quickly in emergencies, especially if the government held attractive portfolios of stocks.

Oil Ultimatum

Arabs Order Hike

BEIRUT (UPI) — Four Arab nations handed an ultimatum to western petroleum companies Tuesday, demanding a substantial price increase and threatening to cut off oil supplies if it were not forthcoming.

Oil ministers of Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Algeria, meeting in Tripoli, agreed a time limit should be set for the companies' answer, the Middle East News Agency said.

The ministers did not disclose the deadline or the minimum increase they are seeking.

An official statement said "pumping of oil will be stopped if the companies do not accept and apply" the figure the four states agreed upon.

Reports said the nations have been demanding an increase of 110 per cent on the price per barrel to $3.75. Oil sources said the companies refused to go beyond $3.10.

The statement said "The four agreed on minimum demands, and the Libyan government will decide on the time for stopping the oil pumping if the demands are not met."

Persistent fears have been expressed that Libya's socialist regime would nationalize the companies' operations.

Copper Takeover

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — The Chilean government of Marxist President Salvador Allende Tuesday took over the operations of the giant Chuquicamata and El Salvador copper mines, jointly owned by the state and the Anaconda company of the United States.

March Honors Slain Trio

BELFAST, - Northern Ireland (UPI) — Thousands of Roman Catholic and Protestant women, carrying heart-shaped wreaths of white carnations, marched through this city Tuesday to honor three Scottish soldiers shot to death in the capital's suburbs last week.

As dozens of separate mourners' processions snarled the city's traffic, security forces announced a fourth arms find in the past three days.

An army spokesman said troops found four nail bombs, three rifles, a shotgun, a crossbow, two boxes of assorted ammunition and a selection of knives under floorboards in a derelict house in the predominantly Roman Catholic Lower Falls road area of Belfast.

"It was a magnificent find," an army spokesman said. "Every one of us is delighted."

Youth Aid Plan Attacked

desirous of improving the world in which it finds itself."

And for all these objectives, the federal government was putting up the $57,800,000, to be shared in the spending by provincial and municipal authorities and social and youth service agencies.

Said Stanfield:

"I simply ask the government, why does it not give the kids a chance to do it?"

The prime minister took less than five minutes to outline his plan of attack on dreaded summer student unemployment.

The public service, he promised, would provide "as many temporary jobs as possible," but cited no figures.

The private sector, business and industry, would be encouraged to make its best student employment effort.

But the government wanted to keep clear, he stressed, of what he called "make-work" activities which he said "contribute little to the national well-being either now or in the future."

There would be "more than 100 student employment centres operating," the prime minister disclosed, and sounded as if he was getting down to the fine print of jobs and costs.

But there were no more figures. Few figures, either from the four departments—health and welfare, secretary of state, manpower and immigration, and defence, and one federal agency, the Public Service Commission — assembled by Information Canada in what was pre-advertised as its first big assignment.

Students "not wishing to work," or unable to take a job, were assured by the prime minister they would not be forgotten.

For the footloose there would be government-assisted opportunities for "travel, study and voluntary occupations."

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald said armories will not be used this year as youth hostels for the some 400,000 persons expected to be hitch-hiking across the country.

Instead, public and high schools will be used, he said.

There would be roadside service kiosks for information and travel assistance.

There would be outlets provided, pledged the prime minister, for youth "anxious to work," and for their "energy, imagination and altuism into projects beneficial to the entire community."

There would be the chance to make good on their "urge to fight pollution" and display their "concern for the disadvantaged."

Then came the prime minister's enunciation of his "challenge to youth," that Stanfield turned back on him with the demand to "give the kids a chance."

The Manpower Department, Stanfield recalled for starters, had forecast there would be 990,000 students job-hunting this summer, 50,000 more than last year.

The prime minister had let drop that the government expected there would be an "additional 800,000 who will not, for some reason, look for work."

The total read, Stanfield added, 1,800,000.

The prime minister had spoken of the government's summer student program "assisting" — but not necessarily providing jobs — for 500,000.

The Conservative leader was skeptical.

To him, only two programs made "any sense," one tagged "opportunities for youth," and the other involving some 600 scholarships for university athletes.

For the NDP, Orlikow took an even darker view of student summer job prospects.

Add to the 990,000 student job-hunters — forgetting altogether the additional 800,000 who wouldn't bother looking for work — the 700,000 people already unemployed, he gloomed.

The total, then, not working, his figures showed depressingly, would be a formidable 2,590,000.

Even looking on the brighter side, said Orlikow, it was "ridiculous" to think that even in spending $15,000,000, "good and useful job projects" could be whipped up on the "five to eight weeks" left until the closing of the university and collegiate years.

And negating much of the good that might have been done, he mourned, was that the government only now in mid-March was coming up with a plan that should have been in the works last September or October.

Real Caouette was convinced that under the emergency circumstances, $57,800,000 was pretty lean. In war, in a national crisis, he was certain, there would be no limit to the mobilization of resources.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

NOTES TO YOU . . .

A reader sent in this little cartoon. It showed two hippie types walking along, one male, one female. The caption was what gave the big chuckle. The male is talking to the female.

"I'll run over and pick up my unemployment cheque and then drop off at the university to see what's holding up my cheque on the federal education grant and look into my research grant cheque. You go on over to the free VD clinic and check on your tests; then go to the free health centre and pick up my glasses and after that go down and pick up the food stamps and slide by the food market and then we'll meet at the federal building at noon for the mass picketing of the stinking establishment."

It the above shoe happens to fit, please wear it.

MUCH is being made of the bad blood between Mayor Courtney Haddock and Ald. Peter Pollen. There are many who insist Pollen will challenge Haddock at the polls this fall as a result of the agreement to disagree. Pollen has denied this on numerous occasions and I have to accept his denials, if for no other reason than the fact I feel Pollen is looking for a political career other than at the civic level.

If Scott Wallace decides not to run in the next provincial election, Pollen might go after his Oak Bay seat, or, maybe he would like to take on David Groos in the Federal Oak Bay riding next time around. Incidentally, it becomes more and more apparent as time goes by, that Groos is a lame dick and the Liberals are looking for a replacement . . .

REMEMBER all the fuss made when Saanich policemen received a greater pay increase than their fellow officers in the Victoria police department? The complaint was that morale would suffer on the Victoria staff. Well, not to worry. The Victoria policemen were quietly hiked to the same level as the Saanich police and, as a matter-of-fact, given a little extra over and above. So the Victoria department is now the highest paid police department on Vancouver Island — which, I guess, is the way it should be . . .

Milk Gives Calcium

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We recently adopted a year-old baby girl. She doesn't like milk. Is it okay to give her chocolate milk? Or will too much chocolate (we use two teaspoons to a cup) damage her teeth?

Also our 3½-year-old son doesn't like water. Is it okay if he drinks milk, juice, tea, and fruit-flavored drinks, or does he have to have plain water every day? — Mrs. J. W.

First, the baby girl. Chocolate used to have a bad name, accused of a variety of things, but recent studies have largely dispelled those ideas. For instance, the chocolate does not interfere with the amount or absorption of the minerals and vitamins in milk.

There is some sugar content in the chocolate, and I can't say that it might not have some effect so far as tooth decay is concerned, but I doubt if it will be an important matter.

Anyway, better to have flavored milk than no milk at all — and the baby needs the calcium in milk to build good teeth! And bones!

You can, of course, use regular milk in puddings, cereal dishes, and such items of diet.

Chocolate milk, by the way, is being used along with regular milk in school lunches, and you can be sure that the matter had some study.

Now the little boy. No need to force plain water on him if he prefers the various flavors. Those drinks are all mostly water. I would have some hesitation about tea, at his age, unless it is very weak. If you mean regular tea, I'd have some qualms, because of the caffeine content.

Remember that fruits and vegetables also have a high water content, and it all goes to make up his daily water requirement.

Dear Doctor: We have heard that mineral oil was good for arthritis by rubbing it on painful parts and also by taking it internally. Is there anything to this? — T. B.

Bucyk Gets 50th Goal In 11-4 Rout of Wings

John Bucyk, a 35-year-old winger who never scored more than 31 times in any of his previous 15 National Hockey League seasons, Tuesday night became the fifth player to get 50 NHL goals in one season.

He shot No. 49 in the first period and reached 50 in the third period as Boston Bruins impressed the largest crowd in Detroit history — 15,547 — by handing the Red Wings an 11-4 trimming.

BEST, BY FAR

Bucyk also had an assist to bring his point total to 104, which is 35 more than he managed in any other season.

Another big gainer Tuesday was Phil Esposito, who scored his 62nd goal and added three assists to boost his lead in the individual point race to six points over teammate Bobby Orr.

Orr managed only one of the 26 Boston points, drawing an assist on a third-period goal by Ed Westfall.

The Chicago-Vancouver game played Tuesday will be shown on Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m.

ON AND ON

Other Bruins who made progress towards significant accomplishments were Ken Hodge, who got his 41st goal to reach 97 points, and Wayne Carleton, who got Nos. 16 and 17 in his effort to become the 10th Bruin to score 20 times this season.

Rocket Richard, Bernie Geoffrion, Bobby Hull (four times) and Esposito preceded Bucyk to the 50-goal plateau and Esposito, Hull, Gordie Howe and Orr were ahead of him in getting 100 points.

Bruins have now won 11 games in a row, a streak in which they have scored 73 goals, and can clinch their first championship in 30 years by winning three of their remaining nine games.

While they rushed towards the East Division championship, Montreal Canadiens were beaten on St. Louis ice for the first time when the Blues rocketed to a 6-2 triumph, Vancouver Canucks took a 7-4 beating from Chicago Black Hawks and Minnesota North Stars bounced Los Angeles Kings, 7-2.

Canadiens, almost certainly doomed to third place and a first-round Stanley Cup confrontation with the Bruins, were overpowered.

Blues took 44 shots at Phil Myre and among those who were successful were ex-Canadiens Chris Bordeleau, Fran Huck and Jim Roberts.

Results left Blues needing one win to clinch a West Divison playoff spot and kept them eight points ahead of North Stars.

Bobby Hull and rookie goalkeeper Gilles Maloche, playing his first NHL game, bothered Canucks the most.

Hull scored once and assisted four times while Maloche performed a few miracles in the third period while stopping 20 of 22 shots.

Hull now has 90 points and nine games left in which to become the third player to own two 100-point seasons.

By KEVAN HULL

Burly Bruce Cowick was one of the few Cougars feeling fit Tuesday night, and it was a fortunate thing for the Victorians in their B.C. Junior Hockey League game with Chilliwack Bruins.

Cowick exploded for three goals to continue his late-season splurge as the Cougars struggled to a 4-2 victory before a "Kids Night" crowd of 1659.

The Victorians were missing three regulars — goalkeeper Ed Forslund, defenceman Randy Bock and forward Scott Munro — with the flu and coach Mike Shabaga said that at least five other players shouldn't have been playing.

Chilliwack, a much improved club since Orv Litchfield took over coaching duties in mid-season, was unlucky in not having taken a first-period lead despite being outshot, 5-9.

Mike Randolph failed to score on three outstanding chances, hitting the left goalpost on two occasions and being robbed by Darryl Fedorak on a breakthrough.

Cowick gave the hosts a surprise goal nine seconds before the period ended, his fast-rising shot bouncing in off goalkeeper Dave Maynard's arm.

BRUCE TIED IT

However, Cowick slipped in the rebound from a Gerry Bond point shot for his 30th goal of the season to tie the score and Chris Riddell deflected a Dale Pennock shot before the period ended for what proved to be the winning goal.

Cowick completed the scoring midway through the final period, again tapping home a rebound from a Bond drive.

Cougars end their regular schedule on Saturday night when they meet the second-place Vancouver Centennials.

In Tuesday's other game, Penticton Broncos regained first place in the Okanagan Division from idle Vernon Essos by downing the visiting Kelowna Buckaroos, 6-4.

Trail Hosts Junior B Hockey Final

The best-of-three B.C. junior "B" hockey semi-final series between Trail Smoke Eaters and Victoria Cubs has been shifted to Trail.

Originally scheduled to begin at Memorial Arena Friday night, the series will now get under way Monday in the interior with the second game to be played Tuesday night. If a third game is needed, it will be played Wednesday night.

Winner of the series will advance to the best-of-three final for the provincial title against Kamloops.

Duncan Legion Rink Making Strong Bid

CHARLOTTETOWN — B.C., represented by a Duncan rink skipped by Gordon Stewart and including Harry Dewar, Frank Fraser and Al Carlson, won twice on Tuesday to move into a tie for the lead in the national Legion curling championship.

FIVE-WAY TIE

The Vancouver Islanders created a five-way tie for the top spot on Tuesday's second draw when they bested Jim Ferguson, 7-5, to knock the Saskatchewan rink out of the unbeaten class.

It was a 5-5 tie starting home and Stewart made good use of the last-rock edge by taking out shot rock and staying for two.

That pulled him even with Saskatchewan, Alberta, New Brunswick and Ontario, who also finished the day with 3-1 records.

Earlier Tuesday the Duncan rink eased by Newfoundland, 12-7, for its second win in three games.

Saskatchewan defeated Prince Edward Island in the morning to run its record to 3-0 and take the lead when Alberta's Gordon Killam was beaten, 10-6, by Ontario's Earl Jesse.

Alberta bounced back on Tuesday's second draw to share the lead, edging Mac Scales of Manitoba, 11-10, in an extra-end game.

Stewart gave much of the credit for the upset win over Saskatchewan to vice-skip Dewar.

"He made many clutch shots," Stewart said. "He's the key to our team."

Loss Ends It

Henry Cooper, who regained the title twice after relinquishing it, was dethroned as European and British heavyweight boxing champion on Tuesday when Joe Bugner, 21-year-old Hungarian-born naturalized Briton won a 15-round decision in London. "This is my last fight, you can't go on forever," Cooper said after the fight. Now 37, Cooper finished strongly and the decision was booed by many of the 6000 fans.

Playoff Basketball Near Island Level

Gordon Head Vikings edged Hampton, 29-28, at Mount View high school Monday to advance against Boys' Club in the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association's midget boys' playoff.

Boys' Club, unbeaten this season, have two chances to end the double-knockout tournament, meeting the Vikings tonight at S. J. Willis junior high school and, if another game is needed, Thursday at Mount View.

The winner will advance to the Vancouver Island tournament, a five-team, double-knockout tournament Saturday and Sunday at University school.

In the bantam boys' playdowns, Lansdowne, which is also unbeaten this season, walloped Metropolitan Trojans, 62-28, to advance to the final. The Victoria winner will enter the Island championship, a six-team, double-knockout event at Nanaimo Apr. 3 and 4.

GIRLS' FINAL

Yarrows advanced to the bantam girls' finals with a 23-18 win Monday over Esquimalt and must beat undefeated First United Saints Thursday and Monday to earn a spot in the Island final Mar. 27 and 28 in Duncan.

Six teams will participate in the double-knockout Island championship.

Frazier Ordered To Hospital Bed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Frazier was admitted to hospital Tuesday after complaining he felt weak.

An initial examination by Dr. James Giuffre showed Frazier had high blood pressure.

JUST RELAXING

A hospital spokesman said the world heavyweight champ is "just relaxing." He has been ordered to receive no visitors.

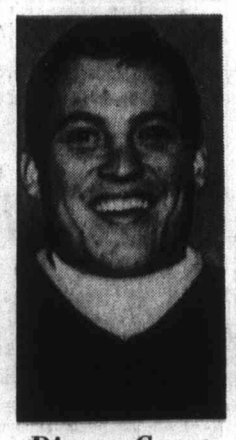

In a statement the hospital said the champion was hospitalized "for further rest and definitive studies" after blood tests were found to be "not satisfactory." The spokesman said no time limit was set for Frazier's stay.

Dr. Guiffre earlier said Frazier's high blood pressure resulted from the recent schedule of appearances he has been keeping and had no bearing on Frazier's 15-round battle with Cassius Clay in Madison Square Garden last Monday.

The champion appeared at St. Luke's Hospital to show films of the fight to children in the wards.

While entertaining the patients, Frazier complained of "weariness" and was taken to Dr. Giuffre.

Dinner Guest

Dave Cutler, who is spending the off-season teaching school in the Victoria area, has accepted invitation to be Sports Celebrity Dinner, scheduled next Tuesday at Empress Hotel. Place-kicker for Edmonton Eskimos of Canadian Football League, Cutler will be in group which includes hockey greats King Clancy and Babe Pratt, CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur, manager Jackie Parker and coach Eagle Keys of B.C. Lions and bowler Helen Duval.

According to the Solunar Tables calculated for this area, the best times for hunting and fishing today and tomorrow will be as follows (Times shown are Pacific Standard Time):

TODAY

Eagle Named After Obstetrician And Delivered in Tompkinsville

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

"Where's Turkey Neck Bend?"

It seemed like such a simple question.

Eagle Keys, head coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders, had just moved to British Columbia Lions in a similar capacity and the news release stated:

"Eagle was born in Turkey Neck Bend, Ky., and graduated from Western Kentucky State College."

SEARCH STARTS

That was when someone asked the question.

Maps in the all-embracing library at The Canadian Press didn't show it. It was not listed in the United States post office directory; nor in Encyclopaedia Britannica and not in the prestige-hung Times Atlases.

The U.S. consulate in Toronto didn't know, but promised to check. They couldn't find it.

The public library had no record of it.

TOUGH ONE

Canadian Press men in Washington took up the hunt, and correspondent Ron Currie reported:

"Covering the State of the Union address was a snap by comparison."

His search took him through the telephone company, the postal service, the U.S. Army mapping service, the American Automobile Association and the U.S. geological survey.

HELPFUL

To help out, he also asked about the town of Bugtussle because Keys has been known to state:

"Actually, I come from Bugtussle, but I always say Turkey Neck Bend because who ever heard of Bugtussle?"

Currie's search took him to Capitol Hill, to the office of Representative Tim Lee Carter, a Republican whose congressional fifth district in Kentucky includes Monroe County.

"Keys is telling the truth," Carter said. "Turkey Neck Bend and Bugtussle do exist."

BEND IN RIVER

Turkey Neck Bend, he says, got its name from a bend in the Cumberland River that "resembles the bent neck of a turkey." He says there are about 100 persons living there —"it has fine, river-bottom land."

With those clues, the geological survey people came up with maps to show both. On these, Turkey Neck Bend looks more like an area than a town or village. Bugtussle is about 10 miles to the west.

But the more you research, the more you begin to suspect that the Eagle has been having everyone on all these years.

For instance: His father was not a bird-watcher and thus inclined to name him Eagle. The name came from a Dr. Eagle who delivered him 47 years ago.

And his yarn about his five sisters—Robin, Bluebird, Jaybird, Redbird and Crow? Pure fiction, but a great lead-in to his punch line:

"Crow, she's the ugly sister."

Actually, the girls are named Madge, Faye, Colleen, Laverne and Gloria.

Some of the other stories about him are true, however.

He won't wear red on game day, he carries a hardened hickory nut as a good-luck charm and he's a virtual virtuoso at playing the spoons.

But — and you have to take the bad with the good when you set out to research a point — he did not come from Turkey Neck Bend.

PARTIAL TRUTH

Oh, his father comes from there, all right, but Eagle Keys was born in Tompkinsville, Ky.

And before someone asks "where is Tompkinsville," let it be known that Tompkinsville is right there on the map — about half way between Turkey Neck Bend and Bugtussle.

House Numbers System Rings Bell

LONDON (UPI) — A 43-year-old British housewife, who confessed she knows nothing about soccer, Tuesday received a record $771,456 on the soccer pools.

Mrs. Joan Wilkes, mother of two teenagers scooped the pool with an investment of a little more than $2.40. It was the biggest win ever by one person, although a syndicate of eight men last week shared $852,000.

Mrs. Wilkes said she has been doing the pools for four years but has no real system and uses "lucky numbers" which correspond to matches on the entry list.

To qualify for a prize, a pools player must correctly forecast eight drawn matches from a list of more than 50 fixtures. Only eight games ended all square in last Saturday's English and Scottish program and Mrs. Wilkes had them all in her entry.

"I simply use the number of houses in which members of my family and friends live," she said. "And I always use my own number, 35, and my father's lucky number, 13."

Mrs. Wilkes' husband, Don, runs a demolition business in Leamington Spa, Warwickshire. He had no suggestion on how to spend the windfall.

"I expect I shall just carry on with the business," he said.

U.S. Official Testifies at Stewart Trial:

Couple Was Found in Gas-Filled Room

NANAIMO—A United States immigration officer told Nanaimo Supreme Court Tuesday of finding Dr. Glen Gold-Stewart and his companion, Maria Trigiani, in a gas-filled room in a San Francisco apartment Nov. 24, 1970.

Stewart is being tried for non-capital murder in connection with the death of Cornelius (Gordon) Adrian Kralt, on or about Oct. 31, at a bible camp on Pachena Bay near Bamfield.

Kralt's mutilated and partially decomposed body was found Nov. 22, in a field near Ross Camp.

Michael G. Harpold, immigration investigator with the U.S. justice department, said that when he first knocked on the door of Apt. 308, 2415 Van Ness Ave., Stewart opened it a crack, then slammed it shut when Harpold identified himself.

Door Open

Harpold said he knocked again, Stewart again opened the door a crack and handed him a California driver's licence in Stewart's name.

Harpold told the court he kept his foot in the door and could hear Stewart attempt to barricade it.

"I asked him to let me in and just talk this thing over," Harpold said.

He then went to get the manager of the building, and when he returned, there was the smell of kitchen gas from the room.

Harpold said he went via a fire escape to an unlocked window, entered the apartment and found Stewart and Miss Trigiani sitting at the kitchen table.

"The kitchen was filled with gas," Harpold said.

He said all the handles had been removed from the stove and all four burners and the oven were emitting gas.

He told the court he threw open the window and turned off the gas.

He said Stewart told him, "You can't do this. You've got to have a warrant to do this," and indicated he would like to see a lawyer.

Passed Out

Harpold said he replied, "I didn't think I needed a warrant to save your life."

He said Miss Trigiani had passed out and was on the floor, and he tried to get Stewart to help her.

He said, "I asked him why it should be my place to have to urge a doctor to help someone who obviously needs help."

He said Stewart told him Miss Trigiani was all right, and that she had just fainted.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer R. F. MacIsaac, Haropold said that Stewart examined Miss Trigiani to find her pulse and heartbeat.

Harpold said he told Stewart, "I know you're in very deep trouble in Canada," and that Stewart replied, "Yes, I'm the man you're looking for."

He said Stewart then lost consciousness and a few minutes later both he and Miss Trigiani were taken to hospital by ambulance.

Two empty pill vials were found in a wastebasket in the kitchen, he said, and a fishing knife on the dresser.

Harpold said Stewart was registered in the apartment as Robert Campbell, and in a wastebasket a torn-up letter was found addressed to that name.

Gun Drawn

He said the pill bottles had labels that showed they were prescribed by Stewart and filled out in the San Francisco area.

Under cross-examination, Harpold said he had reason to believe Stewart was armed and that he entered the apartment with his service revolver drawn, loaded and pointing at the ceiling in a warning position.

He said when he was sure Stewart had no gun, he put his revolver away.

He was asked if he could "honestly expect" Stewart to react as a doctor and treat Miss Trigiani while he was "en route to suicide."

He said yes, and also replied affirmatively when asked if there were "certain reasons" for Stewart being in such a state of despair that he would commit suicide.

He said he learned after this event that Stewart had declared bankruptcy and was having difficulties over visiting rights to his children.

He said Stewart had no medical equipment with him.

Clothes Discussed

He explained that Kralt liked to surf and in the course of his work operated a power saw — two activities that could lead to injuries. He said he had originally urged Kralt not to take the job.

McLeman was asked how he could be so certain when he gave testimony describing what clothes of Kralt were missing.

He replied that during the summer, when the camp was in operation, he and Kralt sometimes exchanged clothes and together bought clothes to replace those damaged at work.

McLeman repeated testimony that he checked with the Victoria office of the association and found Burrows had not been given permission. Witness then went to the government wharf at Bamfield to talk with Burrows and warn him to stay away from the camp.

Sister Worried

MacIsaac asked him: "What, if anything, was going on at Camp Ross that you were so anxious to keep Stewart off the property?"

McLeman replied: "Nothing."

MacIsaac asked if he wanted to keep Stewart away, "so you and he (Kralt) and (Bill) Irvine would have a little hide-out to go and have a little fun in every once in awhile."

McLeman said, "no," saying that he and his wife, Kralt's sister, were worried about Kralt being isolated at the camp in case anything should happen to him.

Jack McLeman of Port Alberni, Kralt's brother-in-law, was returned to the witnessbox Tuesday afternoon for a continuation of cross-examination by MacIsaac.

McLeman said Kralt had never told him he was being pursued by a homosexual, only that he was afraid of Burrows.

Camp Job

Previous testimony established that Stewart used the name Dave Burrows when he applied for a job as caretaker of Ross Camp, Pachena Bay.

Witness said that on Sept. 30, Kralt went to his home to report on a conversation he had with Burrows.

McLeman said Kralt told him that Burrows had bossed him around and told him he had permission from an official of the Shantyman's Association to act as camp caretaker.

No Permission

He said he asked Kralt if he was scared of Burrows and that Kralt had replied, "well, sort of."

C. T. D. Whitehouse of Saanichton told the court of spending two hours on Stewart's ketch at Port Alberni Oct. 31.

He identified Stewart and said the latter was using the name Dave Burrows then.

Whitehouse said he went there because his 18-year-old daughter Susan Carol wanted to sign on as crew on the boat and he wanted to satisfy himself that she would be safe.

'Black Eye'

He said Stewart had a black eye, facial lacerations and minor abrasions on his hands.

Whitehouse said Stewart told him he had fallen from the mizzen mast and that they were headed for San Francisco and possibly on to Mexico and Panama.

The trial continues today.

Frank's Two Jobs

Nothing but Grease

By ELIZABETH DUNN

MILLBAY — Despite the fact that he has two jobs, Frank McNeill never manages to get very far away from grease.

In the morning he works as a short-order cook at Val's Restaurant on the Trans-Canada Highway. Come 10 o'clock he changes his apron for a pair of well-greased coveralls and begins his day as a mechanic at the adjacent service garage.

"I enjoy the mechanical work with cars the best, although cooking is a lot cleaner," McNeill said. "Mechanics is more of a challenge; anyone can cook — all it takes is making the food taste good."

His wife, Hilda, who works in the restaurant they lease when McNeill is busy in the garage, admitted that he is the better cook of the two "by far." At mealtime, the two share dinner preparations, but when it comes to mechanical work, McNeill reigns alone.

Although cooking was the first attraction, it did not hold his interest long. "During the 1930s my mother worked as a cook to supplement the family income. When she was unable to do it, I would take over."

As a result, at the age of 15 he was baking bread, pies, cakes and chicken. "We would deliver a pie and a chicken for $1," he recalled. "Now I can't even bake a pie for a dollar."

His older sister was not interested in cooking, so the family culinary duties fell to McNeill. "My sister had a boyfriend at the time, and she was more interested in him than in the kitchen."

Shortly after this initiation, McNeill began his life-long interest in mechanics. "My father bought me an old wreck of a car and said that if I could make it work, I could keep it."

Make it work he did, and a few months later received his driver's licence.

For the next 30 years, McNeill "seemed always to be on the monkey wrench end of everything" with various jobs throughout B.C. in the logging industry.

"I moved my family, my wife and two children, 18 times in 22 years, and neither of the children ever missed a day of school in their lives as a result."

In 1963 McNeill received a letter from a brother in California, who told tales of high wages and sunshine. "I fell for it and decided to take the family down."

Once in California he enrolled in a mechanics course to fill in gaps in his mechanical education. "I came out first in a class of 300," he recalled proudly.

After the course he returned with his family to what he termed "God's country. And I am here to stay."

'Raiding' Charge Levelled

Angry Indian Delegates Rap Recruiting Action by Union

ALERT BAY — Homer Stevens, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers faced a barrage of questions and considerable criticism from delegates attending the Native Brotherhood conference in Alert Bay Tuesday.

Stevens was asked about the motives of his union's standing committee on Indian affairs which at times, delegates said, had made direct contact with the Indian affairs department, bypassing band councils. The latter, several delegates pointed out, formed the only official and legal voice of the native people.

Jim Gosnell, an Indian councillor from the Nass Valley, said non-Indian groups should only lend their support and not make direct representation to the government or other agencies on behalf of the Indian people.

Such action, said many delegates, provided yet another angle through which the Indian affairs department might exert pressure of the "divide and conquer" variety.

Stevens also heard his union being accused of raiding practices.

The Indian Brotherhood, in its 39th year, with more than 1,000 members is the official bargaining agent for Indian fishermen.

"It is and always has been self-sufficient. It does not operate on a government grant," one delegate commented.

"However each branch of the Native Brotherhood must have 20 members in order to have a delegate. Raidings by the United Fishermen have now reached the degree where some branches of the Native Brotherhood have less than the 20 members required for representation," the conference was told.

Such a practice, delegates said, tended to cause dissension and division among people in the villages, with the union usurping rights which actually belonged only to the band council.

Actions of the union's Indian affairs standing committee was likened by one delegate to the tactics of the missionaries of the past.

"It's a case of 'we'll tell you what's good for you,'" the conference was told.

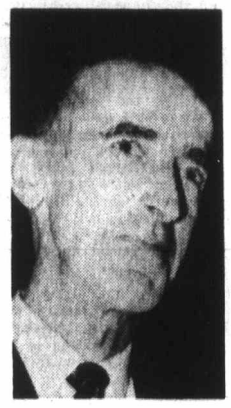

Members of the standing committee were not themselves all Indian, said delegates. A suggestion was made that the committee might well devote itself to the problems of the urbanized Indian and leave matters concerning the villages to properly-elected councils.

Guy Williams, B.C. Brotherhood president, said the fishermen were being squeezed three ways. First by the large companies, secondly by fishing regulations and thirdly by the fishermen's union.

"This three-way squeeze makes fishing very precarious," Williams said.

Today's session will be devoted to committee elections, the board of trustees will seek new directions for action by the Brotherhood, a fisheries committee will be established and a cultural committee formed.

Representatives of the fisheries department and the Fisheries Association will be also present. Delegates say that if the heavy questions which Stevens faced was any indication, fisheries officials would also be in for "avid questioning" throughout the day.

Dunbar

Health Unit Sparks Debate

PORT ALBERNI—A charge of publicity-seeking was made in the council chamber by Alderman Howard McLean Monday. A letter from Ald. George McKnight was read, accompanied by various documents and extracts from minutes of previous meetings to prove that city council had committed itself two years ago to replacement of the space taken over from the health unit by the expanding needs of city hall.

Plans for an addition to the Elizabeth Street health office were approved by council last week, with Ald. McLean and George Dunbar voting against the motion.

"You made your point, you got your majority, what more do you want?" McLean demanded after McKnight's letter was read.

"Any attempts at publicity seeking didn't come from this side," McKnight replied.

He told council that if there is any grave argument over the matter, he feared that a $20,000 provincial grant and low interest funds might be lost.

"If we are not to bear the full cost, it would be most advantageous if council could be unanimous on this."

Dunbar said he had never suggested that council was not committed to the building, or that it should not proceed with it. However he said the Municipal Act called for no long term borrowing without a referendum. McLean also said he was opposed to major expenditure, over $100,000 without public approval.

"Why," asked Dunbar, "has the matter suddenly become an urgent issue now, when it was not provided for by the 1969 or 1970 councils?"

Bishop explained that much of 1970 was sent trying to negotiate with the board of health on what the city should build as a replacement. The health board wanted facilities large enough to hold a west coast health unit as well as a local unit.

Expenses Force Increase For Garbage Collection

NANAIMO — Garbage rates will go up in the city of Nanaimo.

At a city council meeting Monday, the waterworks, sewer and garbage committee approved a recommendation that the residential garbage rate be increased from $16 a year to $21 a year.

All other garbage collection rates will be increased proportionately.

The committee said that for some time the revenue from the garbage collection charge has not met the operating expenses.

"Garbage collection is a utility service, and in the opinion of the committee the operation should be self-sustaining."

Council has authorized an agreement to purchase two lots at Victoria Road and Cavan Street for $60,000, paving the way for construction of a parking facility.

Ald. Ted Jenkinson said it is now up to the downtown parking committee to continue working on the project now that the city has taken this first step.

Because of congestion at Brechin Channel boat launching ramp, parking permits will be issued, free to city residents and $12 for those living ouside the city boundaries.

Jenkinson said some details of the plan are still to be worked out, such as temporary permits for those from out of town.

Permits will be required from May 1. Those without permits will have to park outside the boat ramp area.

The city also approved a motion establishing a licence fee of 2 per cent of the estimated net proceeds to be derived from lotteries.

Blood Gifts Save Money

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley hospital patients were saved more than $25,000 last year because of free blood which was made available at Cowichan District Hospital, Cowichan branch of the Red Cross Society was told at its annual meeting recently.

The report was made by Colin Evans of Vancouver, assistant commissioner for British Columbia.

Evans congratulated the Cowichan branch on a continuing response achieved by the twice-yearly blood clinics held at Duncan.

In December, the branch established a record with 618 pints of blood. The previous high total was 509 pints. Mrs. H. C. Graham, chairman of the blood donor committee, was commended for her group's work.

The next clinic will be May 19 and May 20.

Mrs. Louise Hamilton was presented with a citation from the society for her work in swimming instruction and water safety. Last year, her committee arranged for the training of more than 1,000 children.

Officers re-elected were: George Cobbold, first vice-president and acting president; Hector Stone, president; Mrs. F. R. Newham, vice-president; James Dunham, regional vice-president; John Sanders, second vice-president; G. Russell, treasurer; Mrs. D. Power, secretary; Mrs. Graham, blood clinic committee; Mrs. Hamilton, water safety; J. Wunderlick, blood clinic for Crofton; Mrs. L. Mullins and Mrs. A. W. Roberts, emergency; Joe Grey, Red Cross youth; E. F. Fox, publicity.

Alarm Sounds But No Fire

FULFORD — There was only one clap of thunder and a single flash of lightning at Fulford Tuesday but it was enough to confuse local volunteer firemen.

The alarm sounded immediately afterward. Firemen quickly prepared the fire truck and assistant fire chief Fred Hollings phoned Ganges to find out where the fire was. But Ganges had not heard about any blaze.

Man Dies As Car Hits Bluff

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man was killed and his wife injured early Tuesday morning when their car went out of control on an icy section of the Alberni-Parksville highway, near Cameron Lake, and hit a rock bluff.

Dead is Wilfred Mueller, 1515 Waterhouse, a welder at Alberni plywood division. His wife, Margaret, was reported in fair condition at West Coast hospital.

Rezoning Bylaw Upheld

Oak Bay Appeal Succeeds

An appeal by Oak Bay municipality against the quashing of one of its rezoning bylaws by the B.C. Supreme Court last August has been upheld by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

In a written judgment Friday, Mr. Justice C. W. Tysoe said the municipality was acting "in good faith and in the interest generally of the area" last June when it rezoned a lot on Windsor near Newport from service station use to retail use.

Texaco Canada Ltd., which owns the property, had appealed to the B.C. Supreme Court to overturn the rezoning bylaw, which the court did in August. It was the municipality's appeal against the Supreme Court decision that was allowed last week.

Tysoe, who wrote the decision on behalf of himself, Mr. Justice E. B. Bull and Mr. Justice M. M. McFarlane, dealt in his judgment with each of the points that had been raised by Mr. Justice J. F. Gregory in the earlier decision.

Offended Zoning

In overturning the bylaw, Gregory had said the public hearing held before it was passed was "little less than a farce and waste of time" as Mayor Frances Elford, who cast the deciding vote, had her mind made up before the hearing.

Gregory had also written that the bylaw offended the zoning section of the Municipal Act in that "the rezoning was neither initiated nor supported by the owner or occupant of any neighboring property" and that it was directed exclusively at one property owner "at very considerable expense to it."

In allowing the appeal, Tysoe pointed out that the mayor had made her comments about her mind being made up in reply to a request for adjournment of the planned public hearing. The request had been made because lawyer Hugh Henderson would not be present at the scheduled time.

"Undoubtedly she knew that Mr. Henderson was a member of a large law firm which contained more than one competent counsel who could represent the respondent at the hearing and so his, Mr. Henderson's, presence was hardly necessary," the judgment said.

"As a matter of fact, it was Mr. (Lloyd) McKenzie and not Mr. Henderson who appeared for the respondent at the adjournment hearing."

Intent Apparent

Tysoe wrote that Texaco had been aware that council had the intention of keeping the Windsor-Newport area free of service stations. This intention had been made apparent in November, 1968, when a bylaw was passed excluding service stations from retail zones.

A lot next to that zoned for garage used was zoned for retail use and Texaco had hoped to use both of them for a development.

It was council "that conceived the idea of the bylaw and initiated it, as it was conceded it had the power to do, and the members must have held the opinion that it would be in the best interests of the community to pass and adopt it," Tysoe wrote.

Rejects Conclusion

The appeal court decision also rejected Gregory's conclusion that the public hearing was little less than a farce by writing:

"The plain fact is that the respondent had not succeeded in persuading anyone that the bylaw should not be adopted."

Tysoe cited other decisions in which bylaws relating only to specific properties had been upheld.

Page in the Fun Costs Only $5

For a price—up to $150—a place is available in a hierarchy of supporters of Victorian Days, being arranged by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce from May 24 to 29.

Ranks for sale range from page or damsel for $5 (two names for $7.50), to captain or lady-in-waiting at $100 each or $150 for two.

In return for the donation, scrolls denoting the various ranks are available, which will be mounted for an additional $5. All money will go to the Victorian Days celebrations.

The scrolls, according to chamber spokesman M. H. E. Page, will only be sold this year.

Library Grant Whittled

Saanich council Monday night whittled at the municipality's contribution to the Greater Victoria Public Library despite a plea from Mayor Hugh Curtis to yield all the money the institution is seeking.

Instead of $5.19 per capita, which is what the library board asked for, there will be a contribution of $4.89 from Saanich residents, council decided.

The reception given the library board budget in Saanich contrasted with that of Esquimalt, where municipal council granted $5.19 despite a plea from Mayor Art Young that it would only lead to a "disastrous tax increase."

If Saanich had granted the library $5.19 per capita, the municipality's contribution would have been $305,214, an increase of $61,639 over 1970. Saanich's per capita contribution last year was $4.

Ald. Edith Gunning, Saanich's representative on library board, made a plea for the $5.19 contribution, saying that the library has been reorganized and better things can be expected in the future.

Ald. Gunning said the library in its present state was "very shabby" and the current budget was an attempt to bring it "halfway up to date."

However, after Ald. Alan Newberry pointed out that the library had not spent a provincial grant of $44,000 at the end of last year, the majority of council members felt that the municipal share of the 1971 budget should be calculated on a figure from which the B.C. contribution had been subtracted.

Nine Families Assist With Play

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — If the technical and dress rehearsal Sunday of The Sound of Music, was an indication, the Rodger and Hammerstein musical to be performed this week by the Duncan Musical Club will be a success.

The musical will be produced at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday at Cowichan senior high school auditorium.

The cast consists of 90 children and adults. About 20 club members and high school drama students will be the backstage crew and there also will be seven makeup artists and two dressers. One of the nine families involved in the production is Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Sharp and their daughter of Chemainus.

The father is a stagehand, his wife plays one of the nuns, and the couple's daughter Kathy is one of the seven children of the Von Trapp family. The Sunday rehearsal began at 9 a.m. for the technical crew under John Getood and the entire cast rehearsed from 7 p.m. until 1 a.m. Monday. Director and producer is Bob Cooke.

His wife, Grace is musical director, and Ruth Murrell plays an electronic organ.

Royston Water

Region Firm On Decision

CUMBERLAND — Comox-Strathcona regional district has re-affirmed its decision not to consider supplying Royston Improvement District with water until "all matters in connection with the current agreement between Cumberland and Royston" are fully resolved.

The information was contained in a copy of a letter sent to T. G. Ryan, acting on behalf of Royston, which was read at Cumberland council meeting this week.

The water battle between the two areas has been going on for two years.

A reference in the letter to the regional board engaging in "the water supply business of one or both of the parties concerned", caused concern among aldermen.

They stressed that the board had been made fully aware that Cumberland had no intention of selling its water system to the region.

The last portion of the sentence gave rise to concern of aldermen because as the council noted the regional board has been made fully aware that Cumberland has no intention of selling its water system to the regional.

"Are they scared to tell Royston they can't serve them," asked Mayor William Moncrief. "All we want is a rate increase."

Cumberland's representative on the regional board was instructed to clarify the matter at the next regional meeting on March 22.

The village will apply for money under the federal-provincial special loan program. It is hoped that money will be available to provide sewer service to a new area recently incorporated into the village boundaries.

An additional cell for aeration of the sewer lagoon might also be undertaken if the loan was forthcoming, council was told.

A letter was received from Courtenay City Cabs, outlining a proposed rate increase which will be presented to the Public Utilities Commission. Moncrief said: "I have complete faith in the PUC," adding that he would not fight the proposal.

Island Pair Dies In Plane Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Port Hardy man and his wife were killed when their light plane crashed Tuesday morning shortly after taking off from the municipal airport here.

RCMP said Arnold Edward Bernier, 42, and his wife, Clara Ellen, apparently were on their way home to Port Hardy when the crash occurred.

Airport manager Peter Frumento said he saw the aircraft — a single-engine Beechcraft Muskateer — take off at about 8:15 a.m. Frumento said he did not see the plane crash but spotted a cloud of smoke a short time later. The plane was found about a mile south of the end of the runway.

A Canadian Forces helicopter was first to reach the wreckage.

RCMP reported that the aircraft may have had trouble gaining proper altitude, and believed this may have been caused by icing. The temperature at the time of the crash was about 32 degrees.

Transport department investigator Roy Jobling has begun an inquiry into the crash. RCMP said the Berniers had apparently spent Monday night in Campbell River and were anxious to leave early for Port Hardy.

Port Hardy Mayor Nick Cadwallader said Bernier, an employee of MacMillan Bloedel, had lived there about one year. Cadwallader said Bernier was an experienced pilot, who flew often.

The Berniers are survived by a teenage daughter and a younger son.

Nixons Make It Official: Tricia To Wed June 5

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon formally announced Tuesday night the engagement of their daughter Tricia to Edward Finch Cox, a Harvard University law student and son of a prominent New York family.

The Nixons said the wedding would be held at the White House June 5. Miss Nixon, 25, will be the eighth daughter of a president to take her marriage vows in the executive mansion. The most recent was Lynda Bird Johnson who wed marine Capt. Charles S Robb Dec. 9, 1967.

Cox, 24, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cox of New York City and Westhampton, Long Island.

The long-expected announcement came during a party officially organized to celebrate both the 59th birthday of Mrs. Nixon and St. Patrick's Day.

The announcement was made to the accompaniment of a champagne toast with members of both families, close friends and Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch looking on.

After Kidnap Try

Ceylon Under Guard

COLOMBO (Reuter) — A state of emergency was declared throughout Ceylon Tuesday and troops mounted guard at key points on the island off the south coast of India.

Governor-General William Gopallawa declared the emergency on the advice of Prime Minister Mrs. Srimavo Bandaranaike, said a special news bulletin on the state-owned Ceylon Broadcasting Corp.

Rising Tension

The move follows reports of several incidents in Ceylon in the last few weeks, including an alleged attempt to kidnap Social Services Minister Tikiri Banda Tennekoon; the arrest of 26-year-old Rohan Wijeweera, leader of the Peoples Liberation Front, and an attack on the United States embassy.

On March 7, Mrs. Bandaranaike called out the army, navy and air force in the country's 22 administrative districts to maintain law and order.

Reasons Today

The radio said Mrs. Bandaranaika would broadcast today the reasons why the government had to declare the emergency.

Parliament is currently dealing with legislation to declare the country "a free, independent republic" within the Commonwealth.

It is at present a dominion within the Commonwealth.

Youth Aid Plan 'Absurd... Late'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Absurd puffery," stormed Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

"Ridiculous ... to a large extent meaningless," lamented David Orlikow of Winnipeg North, speaking for the New Democrats.

"Band-aid treatment," cried Creditiste leader Real Caouette in indignation.

And so it was with scorn edging to the brink of disbelief that this was all, that the opposition, united in anger, dismissed as entirely inadequate Prime Minister Trudeau's $57,800,000 summer employment, travel and hostel plan for students.

Bringing his attack to its peak, Stanfield quoted the challenge to youth, as the prime minister had called it:

"There is work to be done," the prime minister Tuesday told the Commons in outlining the government's summer youth job program, "there are tasks to be performed.

"There are experiences to be gained.

"There is a whole country to be explored.

"There is a generation

South's Troops Retreat in Laos

SAIGON (UPI) — Front reports said Tuesday U.S. artillery reinforcements were being rushed to the Laotian border to protect South Vietnamese troops retreating from positions deep inside Laos in the face of heavy Communist attack.

Field dispatches and military sources told of increasing casualties as nearly 2,000 South Vietnamese soldiers, some hacking their way through jungles and others aboard U.S. helicopters, tried to get out of the area around fire base Lolo, an outpost 12 miles from the frontier which was abandoned early Tuesday.

About 12,000 North Vietnamese were said to be advancing.

For the second straight day North Vietnamese gunners shelled the U.S. base at Khe Sanh Tuesday night and wounded several American soldiers. Spokesmen said about 70 rounds of rockets, mortars and artillery smashed into the base.

Prosecutor: If Calley Unconvicted

'No Better Than Enemies'

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — An impassioned army prosecutor Tuesday night called on a six-officer court-martial board — "the conscience of the country" — to find Lieutenant William Calley Jr. guilty of murder at My Lai or "make us no better than our enemies."

Capt. Aubrey Daniel III, his voice rising and the muscles of his neck standing out like ropes, closed the case against Calley by turning his back to the board, pointing at the stocky, 27-year-old defendant and crying:

"The duty is yours to find the accused guilty as charged of all offences."

Calley's ears turned red.

The case was to go to the board late Tuesday night—the third anniversary of the killings at My Lai — after the military judge, Col. Reid Kennedy, delivered his instructions to the court-martial board.

If Calley is gound guilty of charges that he murdered, by his own hand and by the men at his orders, 102 unresisting villagers at My Lai, he must be put to death or sentenced to life in prison.

In the defence's final arguments, attorney George Latimer asked the board to distinguish between errors in judgment and criminal acts and "let this boy go free."

Postal Loss Staggering

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor trouble has cost the post office an estimated $31 million in lost revenue in the fiscal year ending this month, Jean Pierre Cote, minister in charge of the department, said Tuesday.

Gamble for Canada: Buy U.S. Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government had the courage to gamble, Canadians could start immediately to buy out the American economy, Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) told the Commons Tuesday.

Saltsman, who appeared delighted as several MPs set aside newspapers and writing pads to listen, said the government has only to look at "how smoothly they (the Americans) bought us out" and learn from past mistakes.

The Commons was debating a Creditiste motion "that this House regrets that the government has not seen fit to apply Social Credit monetary policy." But discussion on the motion, which under House rules does not come to a vote, quickly strayed to other matters.

Saltsman said Canada has about $1 billion in its foreign exchange fund, most of it held in U.S. treasury bills.

Saltsman

This money should be used to buy out companies in the U.S. which are in the process of buying into Canadian companies, said Saltsman.

Canadian businesses could also borrow money on the American market to invest in buying control in American firms. For example, if $500 million had been invested by Canadians in General Motors Co. in the mid-1950s, the same individuals would now own one-third of the firm if they had re-invested dividends.

Saltsman, who said his theory was based largely on a 1957 newspaper article, told the Commons many people in government believe the foreign exchange fund must be kept in liquid and near-liquid forms.

But banks would always be willing to lend the government money quickly in emergencies, especially if the government held attractive portfolios of stocks.

Oil Ultimatum

Arabs Order Hike

BEIRUT (UPI) — Four Arab nations handed an ultimatum to western petroleum companies Tuesday, demanding a substantial price increase and threatening to cut off oil supplies if it were not forthcoming.

Oil ministers of Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Algeria meeting in Tripoli, agreed a time limit should be set for the companies' answer, the Middle East News Agency said.

The ministers did not disclose the deadline or the minimum increase they are seeking.

An official statement said "pumping of oil will be stopped if the companies do not accept and apply" the figure the four states agreed upon.

Reports said the nations have been demanding an increase of 110 per cent on the price per barrel to $3.75. Oil sources said the companies refused to go beyond $3.10.

The statement said "The four agreed on minimum demands, and the Libyan government will decide on the time for stopping the oil pumping if the demands are not met."

Persistent fears have been expressed that Libya's socialist regime would nationalize the companies' operations.

Copper Takeover

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — The Chilean government of Marxist President Salvador Allende Tuesday took over the operations of the giant Chuquicamata and El Salvador copper mines, jointly owned by the state and the Anaconda company of the United States.

March Honors Slain Trio

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Thousands of Roman Catholic and Protestant women, carrying heart-shaped wreaths of white carnations, marched through this city Tuesday to honor three Scottish soldiers shot to death in the capital's suburbs last week.

As dozens of separate mourners' processions snarled the city's traffic, security forces announced a fourth arms find in the past three days.

An army spokesman said troops found four nail bombs, three rifles, a shotgun, a crossbow, two boxes of assorted ammunition and a selection of knives under floorboards in a derelict house in the predominantly Roman Catholic Lower Falls road area of Belfast.

"It was a magnificent find," an army spokesman said. "Every one of us is delighted."
